Giscard warns Mideast on advanced weaponry

PARIS. — French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing disclosed yesterday that he had personally intervened on at least one occasion to prevent the introduction into the Middle East of advanced arms potentially dangerous to Israel's security.

Giscard told a nationally televised press conference that he acted while negotiations were actually in progress," and observers believe he was referring to French promises to sell bomb-producing nuclear piles to either Libya or Iraq or both.

It was Giscard's opinion that the main question in the Middle East conflict is "how to reconcile the two rights" — of Israel to security, and the "right of the Palestinian people to exist."

He warned that the Arabs and Israelis were in "a race to the precipice" that would take on tragic dimensions" if nuclear weapons were introduced.

It was announced, meanwhile, that France has agreed to provide Egypt with naval surface-to-surface missiles, with the first shipment due in the near future. The Egyptian Navy commander, Admiral Mohammed Ali Mohammed, said in Cairo on his return from France yesterday that the missiles will be installed along Egypt's coasts and fitted to gunboats "to raise the combat readiness of the naval forces."

France has provided Egypt in the past with Mirage jets, Crotale surface-to-air missiles and military helicopters.

In his reference to the potentially dangerous advanced arms, the French leader warned of their introduction into the area unless a settlement is reached, adding that "it is not a narrow river of a few additional kilometres (of territory)

Giscard reveals testing of neutron bomb

PARIS (AP). — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing said yesterday that France has developed and tested a neutron warhead and the decision on whether to put the weapon into production could be made in the next two or three years. Major defence decisions on France's new weaponry for the 1980s are expected soon, particularly on whether to strengthen France's strategic nuclear strike capacity or to put more emphasis on tactical nuclear weapons, such as the neutron warhead.

Giscard told a news conference that by 1982 or 1983 France could put into production a neutron warhead such as the one that has already been developed. Two years later, he said, the warhead could be produced in a different conformation, depending on the nuclear armament situation in Europe.

Soviet 'nyet' to U.S. offer seen not final

MOSCOW . — The Soviet press yesterday signalled a Kremlin rejection of U.S. President Jimmy Carter's proposal for a transitional government in Afghanistan, and said that Carter is either making a dangerous mistake or is lying.

A series of articles yesterday appeared to reject the Carter proposal, but also to be looking for greater details of the plan outlined in Belgrade earlier this week.

White House officials with Carter in Lisbon yesterday said that they did not believe they have received a final rejection. They believe that they have put the Soviets into a corner by calling for a "neutral, non-aligned" Afghanistan, giving the Soviets a "face-saving" way out.

Administration officials have said that Carter recognizes that the Russians have legitimate security interests in what happens to Afghanistan and do not want to establish an anti-Soviet government there.

French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing yesterday told a news conference in Paris that he was against the interim arrangements proposed by President Carter because any interim phase would require at least some Soviet troops to remain on Afghan territory. That would provoke more guerrilla resistance and heighten tension, he said. "What should be sought is a definitive solution."

Giscard, who has sought to play intermediary between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, called Moscow's announcement last Sunday of a partial troop withdrawal from Afghanistan "a gesture in the right direction."

He said the withdrawal, and the publicity the Soviet Union gave it, "clearly shows that the Soviet Union intends ... to stop the deterioration of international relations." (UPI, AP)

Iran, Libya in daring plots to kill shah, Egypt claims

CAIRO. — Iran and Libya are making "extraordinary efforts, fit only for fiction movies" in attempts to assassinate the deposed shah, an Egyptian official said yesterday.

Writing in Egypt's semi-official "al-Ahram" newspaper, Rashad Roushdy, an assistant to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, said, "The Libyan and Iranian revolutionary regimes are in agreement. Extraordinary efforts, fit only for fiction movies, have been undertaken by them to reach the shah on Egyptian soil."

Roushdy, Sadat's assistant for cultural affairs, did not describe any of the previously undisclosed assassination attempts against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. The deposed monarchy has been living with his family in a presidential palace in suburban Cairo with Egyptian and Iranian security guards. He arrived in Egypt last March after a three-month stay in Panama following cancer treatment in the U.S.

Roushdy suggested that last week's imposition of martial law on Egypt's frontiers with Libya was designed to prevent further attempts against the life of the shah as well as against Libyan nationals opposed to the regime of Libyan leader Col. Muammar Gaddafi.

Meanwhile, the Kuwaiti news agency Kuna yesterday quoted the commander of Libyan forces on the Egyptian front as saying Libya would not strike first while warning that his country had enough power to repulse any Egyptian attack.

The unidentified officer, according to the agency, said Libya would strongly counter any attack by Egyptian forces and would inflict "heavy losses."

Begin to drum up support for gov't

By SARAH HONIG
Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Prime Minister Menahem Begin this morning will personally join attempts to persuade uncommitted Knesset members not to support the Shai motion to be presented to the Knesset on Monday calling for dissolution of the House and early elections.

Among the MKs Begin is due to see this morning is Mordechai Elgrabli, formerly of the Democratic Movement and now an independent.

Opposition parties are just as vigorously lobbying among the same MKs. A Labour delegation yesterday met with former foreign minister Moshe Dayan in an attempt to impress upon him the importance of voting against the government. Dayan reportedly listened to them for over an hour, but remains inscrutable on the issue.

Rafi sources who spoke to him yesterday told The Post that Dayan had said he would not lend a hand to toppling the government in a no-confidence motion but that he might support an early elections bill.

Some good news was forthcoming for the coalition yesterday when MK Hillel Seidel, who is contemplating resignation from the Likud, said he would not support the Shai motion.

The stand of another "problem MK" is still not clear. Former defence minister Ezer Weizman took off for France yesterday but is expected back late Saturday or Sunday. He has advocated early elections, so it is not clear whether he will vote with the opposition or stay away.

Likud maverick Yitzhak Yitzhaki's leanings are still a mystery to all, and independent Samuel Flatto Sharon issued a statement yesterday that his support of the government hinges on solid promises to ease the housing shortage. But coalition sources say he is not likely to jeopardize his seat in the Knesset, which would make him liable to extradition to face fraud and tax charges in France.

The coalition is confident that many of the problem MKs will not support the opposition, even if they withhold their votes from the coalition.

Meanwhile a long-range threat to Likud unity was re-emphasized last night when the Rafi Executive met in closed session to continue discussions on its own platform in case it decides to break links with the Likud and form its own ticket in the next elections.

Likud forces lose face in ZGC vote on settlements

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Likud-led coalition in the Zionist General Council last night lost face when it had to withdraw a recommendation to "strengthen the existing settlements in all parts of Eretz Yisrael" and give "priority to areas of sparse Jewish population."

But it won back some of its prestige when it narrowly defeated a call by the Labour-led coalition for the World Zionist Organization to give priority to settlement in the Arava, the Negev and the Galilee.

The settlement issue was one of the few items on the ZGC agenda to arouse passion during the sonorous, four-day meeting of representatives of Zionist federations and organizations abroad and Israeli Zionist parties.

The WZO has no authority to decide on the siting of settlements. But the Labour-led coalition, which included the Reform and Conservative movements and the World Confederation of United Zionists (non-party, Hadassah), wanted to use the issue as a slap in the face of the Begin government.

And the Likud-led coalition, which included Mizrahi, was eager to see to it that the government's settlement policies received backing from this Zionist body.

WZO Executive chairman Arye Dulzin told the 170 delegates, in a session whose tension gradually rose to a crescendo, that the two resolutions should be dropped. The results could be misused and misinterpreted by Israel's enemies, and the matter was not under the WZO's aegis, he argued.

The Herut co-chairman of the WZO Settlement Department, Matityahu Drobless, apparently realizing that the mild Likud resolution couldn't win a majority, agreed that it be dropped.

But the other co-chairman, Ra'anan Weitz of the Labour Party, insisted that settlement priorities "can no longer be swept under the rug."

After an ad hoc meeting of the ZGC Settlement Committee, the Likud group agreed to withdraw their resolution but the Labour group insisted that theirs be put to a vote. The first show of hands was inconclusive with the count in dispute. Finally, with time and tempers short and many delegates already gone, the roll was called and the Labour resolution was defeated by 60 to 56.

Another controversial issue split along age lines, with young delegates and observers demanding that a resolution be approved that would have required all heads of Zionist organizations abroad to come on aliya after two terms of office. At the strong insistence of the Hadassah women in the hall, the ZGC presidium found a procedural manoeuvre that effectively buried the proposal by sending it to the ZGC constitution committee for discussion next year.

Muskie blocks French M.E. draft

ANKARA (UPI). — The Middle East cropped up as a point of contention yesterday as NATO ministers wound up their two-day meeting in the Turkish capital. Although U.S. Secretary of State Edmund Muskie described the meeting as "comprehensive and successful," conference sources reported continuing differences also on the issue of East-West arms control and the future of NATO's divided southern flank.

A dispute arose during the conference between France and the U.S. over the wording of the final communique's section on the Middle East.

Muskie opposed a French-proposed draft including a reference to the need for "Palestinian self-determination."

He successfully had it stricken from the communique and replaced by a bland assertion about NATO guaranteeing the "legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

Muskie argued that "self-determination" was open to many interpretations and until it was defined in the autonomy talks between Egypt and Israel it would be best for NATO to refrain from its use.

A small booby-trap bomb was discovered outside the U.S. Embassy after the close of the conference, but it was removed before causing any damage.

South African troops said still in Angola

LISBON (Reuter). — Angola said yesterday a 3,000-strong South African force had invaded the south of the country, occupied several towns and killed over 300 civilians.

The Angolan news agency Angop quoted a defence ministry communique issued in Luanda, the capital, as saying the force had moved into Angola on June 7 by crossing the border with South African-controlled Namibia (South West Africa).

The ministry said the South African force was still in southern Angola and gave details of four points they occupied.

N-workers demonstrate

Nuclear research centre workers have been demonstrating for the past two days outside the premier's offices in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv in protest against what they claim to be infringements of their labour contract by the government.

The workers, who are employed by the Prime Minister's Office, declared a work dispute a month ago. They say they have adopted work sanctions because of the government's refusal to discuss their grievances.

Artillery duel reported on Iraq-Iran border

BAGHDAD (UPI). — Iraq said its troops destroyed several Iranian positions on their joint border during artillery clashes which began on Wednesday night and continued until the early hours of yesterday.

Council debate on Jerusalem resumes

Jerusalem Post Correspondent and Agencies

UNITED NATIONS. — The UN Security Council yesterday resumed its debate on an Arab-sponsored resolution calling for economic sanctions against Israel because of its position on Jerusalem.

A vote on the resolution was expected either today or early next week.

U.S. Ambassador to Egypt Alfred Atherton yesterday said the U.S. would not announce its position on the resolution until the draft resolution before the council is studied carefully.

Atherton's statements were reported from Cairo, where he met with Egyptian officials to tell them of America's "opposition to the measures taken by Israel to move the offices of its prime minister to (East) Jerusalem."

Israeli troops said in South Lebanon

BEIRUT (Reuter). — Military sources here claim that Israeli troops this week set up three strongholds in the South Lebanese border region controlled by Christian militias under Major Sa'ad Haddad.

They said yesterday that the soldiers had seized more than 440 dunams of land and had begun fencing off the area. UN sources said more than 100 Israeli troops were using the deserted South Lebanese village of Khiam for military training.

Soviet Navy CoS will visit Syria

MOSCOW (UPI). — Georgi Yegorov, chief of staff of the Soviet navy, will visit Syria later this month at the invitation of the Syrian armed forces, the military newspaper "Krasnaya Zvezda" said on Thursday.

Wage talks aim to avert labour strife

By JOSHUA BRILLIANT
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Histadrut and private employer negotiators last night failed to agree on a wage pact for 1980/81, but some optimism was seen in the fact that another meeting was scheduled for today in an effort to head off major labour strife over the wage issue.

The meeting between Histadrut Secretary-General Yeroham Meshel and Avraham Shavit, chairman of the Coordinating Bureau of Economic Organizations, ended inconclusively last night at Shavit's home in Afeka.

But a Shavit aide said that agreement on a meeting today was a good sign, indicating that the sides were "not all that far apart." Last week, the aide said, the sides seemed so far apart that there appeared to be nothing to discuss.

A Histadrut source nonetheless said that if a wage agreement is not reached by Sunday morning, Histadrut leaders will ask the labour federation's executive that afternoon to approve pressure tactics, including strikes.

If a wage agreement is reached, workers will most likely receive a 7-8 per cent increase with their July wages, to be paid in August.

Civil Service Commissioner Eitan Jacobson yesterday predicted an imminent breakthrough in the deadlocked wage negotiations.

He told labour reporters here that he expected the breakthrough in the talks between the Histadrut and the private employers by Sunday night which would pave the way for a subsequent agreement in the public sector.

Should the parties fail to reach an agreement within 10 days, he would recommend monthly advances. A well-placed source said the commissioner's office was reckoning on a 4 per cent advance.

Jacobson told reporters that two meetings scheduled with the Histadrut's Trade Union Department this week had been postponed because the finance ministry wanted several cabinet ministers to approve its position before presenting it to the labour federation.

Some civil servants are expected to press for wage increases beyond the raises the Civil Service Commission and the Histadrut will agree on. In the past civil servants have won their ministers' backing for extra raises. The Finance Ministry now wants to make other ministries share responsibility for the agreement, Jacobson said.

The economic cabinet had planned to meet today to discuss the wage issue, but last night it was learned that the meeting had been cancelled.

Two meetings earlier this week were also called off at the last minute "for technical reasons." On Wednesday, Meshel presented an ultimatum to the government, demanding a wage agreement before Sunday's Histadrut Central Committee meeting.

Wage policy will be on the agenda of the full cabinet meeting on Sunday, which is to decide on the last round of budget cuts, to an amount of IS540m., recommended by the economic cabinet in last Sunday's meeting.

A well-informed government source last night indicated that the differences between the Histadrut and the Coordinating Bureau of Economic Organizations had

PLO, uninvited, readies Olympic team

Post Military Correspondent

The PLO is in the advanced stages of putting together a team to the Moscow Olympics, although the Palestinian terrorist organization is not a recognized member of any international sporting body.

The Jerusalem Post was informed last night that the PLO intends to send a volleyball team and an athletics squad to the games, as well as delegates to meetings of the various international sporting federations which were scheduled to take place during the games. The organizer of the PLO Moscow presence is Hadj Madlak, who in the past has tried to get recognition for the PLO in five sports federations — volleyball, basketball, gymnastics, weightlifting and handball — without success.

An Israeli observer commented wryly last night that "the last time the PLO attended the Olympics was at Munich in 1972" — referring to the terror attack which left 11 Israeli sportsmen dead.

As far as could be ascertained last night the Soviets have not invited the PLO, either officially or unofficially. But it is felt that they will not block the PLO initiative. Unclear, however, is the reaction of the International Olympic Committee to the possible presence of the terror organization at the games.

Police ranks bitter over kidnapping

By YORAM BAR
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Recriminations have begun to sweep through police ranks over the continued failure to solve the kidnapping of eight-year-old Oron Yarden of Savyon.

With the atmosphere at police headquarters reported tense, a senior officer in the northern district told The Jerusalem Post that he felt the Tel Aviv district police have made all the mistakes they possibly could, and should be held responsible for the results.

The mood of dissatisfaction has apparently been intensified by the impending release of the five suspects still held by police. They will be freed in the next few days, it has been learned.

Sources in national headquarters and officers from three different police districts told The Post yesterday that the inspector-general is ignoring the severity of the situation in not appointing a new investigating team.

The sources, who said that after more than two and a half weeks the team from Tel Aviv headquarters had had ample opportunities to find the kidnappers, insisted the case should now be turned over to a team from national headquarters.

The senior source from the northern district was particularly critical of the failure of the detectives who were in Amos Yarden's car on June 10, when he delivered the ransom money. They were only metres away from the kidnapper and should have been able to catch him, the source said.

The source said the area of Neveh Ne'eman, where the ransom money was to be picked up, was surrounded by police equipped with sophisticated electronic equipment and whose sole task was to catch the kidnapper.

"When 100 people are tracking a single man in less than one square kilometre, with infra-red night-vision binoculars, it's hard to understand how he could get away. I would think the public deserves to know how it happened," he said.

The national police spokesman said yesterday that the police have already started applying the lessons they learned from the kidnapping, which took place on Sunday, June 8.

He said a post-mortem of the police operation so far had been held at Tel Aviv district headquarters, with the participation of the inspector-general and senior police officers. At that special meeting, the spokesman said, orders were issued to draw up procedural guidelines to follow should similar kidnappings occur in the future.

By SARAH HONIG
Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — If elections were held now and Ezer Weizman headed his own independent list he would win 16 Knesset seats, according to the latest Mina Zemach opinion poll, conducted for the "Monitin" monthly. The poll also indicates a slight increase in the popularity of Labour Party chairman Shimon Peres, a levelling off in the meteoric climb of former prime minister Yitzhak Rabin, and a small drop in Prime Minister Menahem Begin's standing.

More pople now want early elections. The figure is up from 48 per cent last month to 57 per cent now, according to the poll.

A representative sample of 1,218 persons were asked whom they would vote for if Weizman formed his own independent list. In such a case, Labour would win 55 seats, the Likud 18, Weizman 16, the National Religious Party 10, the Aguda bloc six, Tehiya two, and other lists 13, the results indicated.

If Rabin were heading the Labour list, the Alignment would do better, with 62 seats, according to the poll. The Likud would fare worse, with only 16, and Weizman would get 14, the NRP nine, Aguda five, Tehiya two, and the others 12.

If Weizman were not running alone, the Alignment would win 63 seats, as against 60 a month ago. The Likud would be down to 25 from 26 last month, the NRP would remain stable at 10, and Aguda at six. Tehiya would have won only two, instead of the four seats predicted for it a month ago.

In a simple popularity contest Rabin continues to lead, but with only 37.9 per cent of the total as against 38.5 per cent last month. Begin is down to 20.2 per cent, compared to 23.9 per cent a month ago. Peres is up to 21.1 per cent from a low of 17.5 per cent last month. Weizman is last, with 12.6 per cent. Last month he trailed at 12.8 per cent.

When Rabin and Peres alone are pitted against each other, Rabin again appears to slide, though he still leads with 57.6 per cent against 30.2 per cent for Peres. Last month it was 62.5 per cent for Rabin and 27.1 per cent for Peres. Among Labour voters the tendency is even more marked, with Rabin down from last month's 67.6 per cent to 55.5 per cent and Peres up from last month's 38.5 per cent to 42.0 per cent.

Rain delays Borg-Glickstein match

By JACK LEON
Jerusalem Post Correspondent
and Agencies

LONDON.— Israeli tennis star Shlomo Glickstein waited all day yesterday for his second-round singles encounter against four-time Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden, only to be told at 7:30 p.m. that more rain had forced postponement until this afternoon — weather permitting.

Glickstein, 22, said last night, "I am actually happy that I didn't have to play Borg today, as I am a little tired after the very hard match against Ramirez, and the rest has benefited me a lot." Glickstein beat Mexican Raul Ramirez in a five-set opener.

On four occasions yesterday play had to be stopped because of rain, bringing the weather stoppages for the week to eight.

Before the heavy storms hit in mid-afternoon though, former champions Jimmy Connors, Billie Jean King and Evonne Goolagong Cawley all scored straightset victories to advance to the third round.

Play is scheduled to start at noon today.

Brown discusses F-15s with Saudis

GENEVA (AP). — U.S. Defence Secretary Harold Brown met with Saudi Defence Minister Prince Sultan here yesterday and said afterwards that the Saudi request for enhanced combat capability of their U.S.-supplied F-15 fighters will remain under study by the administration. He said the Saudis understand that any future decision would require consultations with congress.

"We did not ask the Saudis to withdraw their request," Brown told reporters when asked whether the U.S. was trying to have them shelve their request because of concern voiced by congressional leaders.

The request is purportedly for fuel tanks and bomb racks that would increase the F-15's range and improve its offensive power.

The 60 F-15 fighters are to be delivered starting late this year under a $4b. contract signed two years ago.

Brown noted that he assured Congress in 1978 that the U.S. did not intend to sell the Saudis any other systems or armaments that would increase the range or enhance the ground attack capabilities.

Begin decries U.S. arms sales to Arabs

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Prime Minister Menahem Begin last night called on friends of Israel to pressure the U.S. government not to sell sophisticated weapons to Saudi Arabia and Jordan.

Addressing the closing session of the Zionist General Council at Jerusalem's Binyenei Ha'ooma, Begin warned that the technologically advanced weapons that the U.S. was planning to sell to Israel's enemies could wreak havoc on Israel's population.

"We would shoot down many of these planes if they were to attack," he said, "but you can't hit all of them.... With God's help, we would win a war, but there would be many casualties here."

Sounding very much like the defence minister, Begin reeled out statistics. Jordan, he said, will get 265 Chieftain tanks that Britain had slated for the shah of Iran, as well as American tanks. Iraq has 3,050 tanks of the latest kind and has bought 1,200 tank carriers. Four Iraqi armoured divisions could reach Israel in time of war, he said.

Jewish Agency board chairman Max Fisher, in his first-ever appearance at the Zionist General Council, said: "We are all Zionists" and urged greater Jewish unity and a de-politicization of the WZO.

WZO chairman Arye Dulzin welcomed Fisher's "conversion" to Zionism and said that the movement needs "serious revision."

New Fiji envoy

Experts cool to legislation to expel pro-PLO students

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Leading university administrators and jurists yesterday reacted unenthusiastically to Premier Menahem Begin's recent suggestion for legislation which would facilitate the expulsion from campus of Arab students who express support for the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Hebrew University Rector Raphael Mechoulam said that, while, "as a private person," he tended to approve the banning of expressions of support for the PLO, he feared such a law could encroach on basic human freedoms.

"In any event, if support for the PLO is outlawed, it must be done nationwide and must not be restricted to campuses," said Mechoulam.

Hebrew University dean of students Lina Ben-Dor said yesterday that Begin's proposal "fell on me like a bomb." She noted, however, that it conformed with the students' union resolution of Tuesday night, which called on universities to expel all PLO-supporting students. Ben-Dor said that the university authorities were now discussing policy for next year and hinted that they would adopt a harder line than they have in the past against political demonstrations on campus. She said that this would apply "impartially, both to those supporting the PLO and those supporting Rabbi Meir Kahane's Kach movement."

A leading member of the legal establishment told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that laws already exist under which people can be tried for expressing support for the PLO, but that until now the judicial system has approached such matters in a liberal spirit and has never brought anyone to trial for his political opinions.

The jurist said that various laws and emergency regulations regarding "sedition and incitement" could be used to cover expressions of support for organizations desiring the destruction of Israel. He also said that the Terrorism Law enacted in the early 1950s could be invoked.

UN officer and merchant jailed for drug deals

A UNIFIL officer and an East Jerusalem shopowner were sentenced yesterday in Jerusalem District Court after being found guilty of possessing 63 kg. of opium and of conspiring to traffic in the drug.

Judge Yehuda Cohen sentenced the Austrian UN officer, Walter Wiedl, to 2½ years in prison and Maharan Matossian, a photography shopowner, to seven years.

Weidl was arrested on May 20 after driving to Gaza from Jerusalem. The opium was discovered in his car. He claimed in his defence that he was the innocent carrier of "personal belongings" for the East Jerusalem merchant.

Judge Cohen said that the UNIFIL officer's foreign citizenship and willingness to leave the country do not diminish the public interest in putting an end to the plague of drug traffic. (Itim)

Burg, on way to U.S., will miss Knesset vote

TEL AVIV (Itim). — Interior Minister Yosef Burg will leave on Sunday for Washington, to participate in a resumption of peace talks with Egyptian and American representatives.

His absence in the Knesset on Monday for the vote on the opposition proposal to hold early elections will be balanced by the absence of MK Meir Amit (Labour) through a pairing arrangement.

Burg made his announcement last night at the first meeting of the Public Committee for the Welfare of Police and Prison Warders, at Beit Mifal Hapayis.

Thousands mourn slain officer of Security Services

HOD HASHARON (Itim). — Among the thousands of mourners who attended the funeral of security services officer Moshe Golan at the nearby village of Magdiel yesterday were Prime Minister and Defence Minister Menahem Begin and Deputy Defence Minister Mordechai Zipori.

Golan, 34, who was killed in the line of duty in Israel on Wednesday, was buried at the military cemetery in Magdiel.

Zipori, who gave one of the eulogies, said that he was not free to divulge the details of Golan's service. Golan served in the IDF for 11 years, and in the Shin Bet (General Security Services) for five.

The crowd of mourners was stunned and many burst into tears when Golan's nine-year-old son said the "Kaddish" prayer, followed by his grandfather.

Golan, who came to Israel from Egypt at the age of two, is survived by his wife, three children, parents and a brother.

Reuter adds:

The radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) yesterday claimed responsibility for assassinating Golan.

A statement issued by the Front said one of its groups operating "within the occupied homeland" had ambushed him in an operation named after Tagrid al-Batma, a 22-year-old girl student who died on Monday after a bullet fired accidentally in Bethlehem last week ricocheted and hit her in the neck.

which could protect Israel from new weapons which could be far more powerful and have a far longer range (than anything now existing in the Middle East)."

Giscard called for Israel's withdrawal to its pre-June 1967 borders and warned that the international "guarantees" for "just and recognized borders" exclude the territories occupied by Israel in 1967.

He said that the Venice declaration, calling for Palestinian "self-determination," was adopted by the nine European Community chiefs of state and governments without any difficulty. In reply to a question, he added that the Nine were now preparing diplomatic steps to put their declaration into practical effect but refused to say what these moves may be or when they will occur.

The French president, who carefully avoided using the words "Palestinian state" or mentioning the PLO, said that Palestinian recognition of Israel and Israel's recognition of the Palestinian "rights" must take place within the framework of a global peace settlement. The basis for any such settlement, he said, was "Israel's acceptance that it should evacuate the territories (occupied during the Six Day War)."

The French president ruled out any possible long-term settlement for the Middle East as long as Israel fails to accept the principle of evacuation. He said the Camp David agreement, establishing peace between Israel and Egypt, is based on the very same principle: "Evacuation of the territories gradually, accompanied by the creation of a situation of peace."

He flatly rejected Israel's claim to the territories on religious grounds, citing figures from memory to show that Jews constituted about one per cent of the population in those territories.

He said he supported "secure and recognized frontiers" for Israel, but "internationally recognized frontiers cannot and should never encompass occupied territory."

Giscard said charges by critics of his pro-Arab policy that France was seeking friends among Middle East oil producers were "absurd."

"France was concerned about this problem long before oil problems appeared," he said.

The French president refused to comment, in spite of repeated proddings, on his reaction to the French Jewish community's protests against his Middle East policy or to say why he refuses to visit Israel though he has paid several visits to Arab countries in the Middle East.

According to diplomatic observers, the president seemed confident of West European support, and Elysee Palace sources said that his EC colleagues "fully backed" France's position, with certain countries actually pressing for faster and more concrete action in recognizing the PLO as a partner in the peace talks. Fund for defence contributions

Prime Minister Menahem Begin yesterday established a new defence fund for contributions from workers who wish to donate one day's salary a month to the defence establishment.

Begin and Chief of Staff Rafael Eitan have called for such donations as a result of the controversy over cuts in the defence budget.

Banks will open accounts for deposits into the fund, and a public committee headed by Deputy Minister Yoram Aridor will coordinate the contributions, which go to the Treasury's accountant-general.

Treasury sources said the prime minister had apparently given up hope of transferring funds through places of employment, since the Histadrut and other professional organizations oppose the programme.

Egypt rents embassy for IS295,000 annually

TEL AVIV. — Egypt rented a four-storey building for its embassy yesterday, paying out $60,000 (IS295,000) advance on a year's rent, an embassy official said.

The official said the building, on Basel Street in North Tel Aviv, contains about 30 rooms and "no view."

Since the exchange of ambassadors on February 26, the Egyptians located their embassy in the Tel Aviv Hilton Hotel.

Tadiran in major campaign to sell wares to U.S. Army

By WOLF BLITZER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Tadiran, Israel Electronics Industries, Ltd., is making a major effort to break into the U.S. armed forces market by trying to negotiate some joint cooperative ventures with counterpart U.S. firms.

The Israeli company, whose worldwide exports last year reached nearly $100m., has set a $130m. goal for 1980. So far, very little goes to the U.S.

For the past few days Tadiran has displayed its latest military-related communications systems at the annual convention of the prestigious Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association at the Sheraton Washington Hotel.

Under a recently signed offshore procurement agreement with the U.S., Israel is now permitted to sell military equipment to the U.S. armed forces. Tadiran and other Israeli military manufacturers are trying to take advantage of the accord.

But given the currently high unemployment rate in the U.S., Tadiran and the other firms have found themselves in a rather sensitive position. They do not want to be accused of "stealing" U.S. business.

Thus, in an effort to get around this barrier, Tadiran is hoping to find American companies interested in working together to develop and manufacture electronics equipment and then to negotiate contracts with the U.S. armed forces.

Tadiran officials believe some of their recent advances in the state-of-the-art technology have surpassed even those achieved in the U.S. Some were unveiled at the convention here this week.

Specifically, Tadiran has developed surveillance and communications equipment immune to enemy countermeasures, according to Chaim Peled, the company's public relations director.

Uproar in Labour Party over dovish position paper

By SARAH HONIG
Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Proposals to permit the hoisting of Jordanian flags in East Jerusalem and to dismantle Jewish settlements in Judea and Samaria, are causing an uproar in the Labour Party.

The proposals are part of a position paper to be submitted to the platform preparatory committee of the Labour convention planned for December. It was drawn up by the Beit Berl research department. Many in the party say that is it is the most dovish paper ever presented, and that if adopted it would signal a considerable move leftward by Labour in comparison with its 1977 election platform.

The paper speaks of an interim agreement with Jordan which would leave the final status of Jerusalem as well as the recognized boundaries of Israel still undetermined and presumably to be fixed when a full peace agreement is reached.

This interim accord, according to the position paper, need not be publicly announced and can be kept secret. In any case, it would mean a unilateral Israeli withdrawal from most of Judea and Samaria, would award Jordan access to Gaza port and would give it some sort of status in Jerusalem, including the right to raise its flag there.

It is not certain that the paper will ever reach the convention floor in the form of a proposed resolution, since many in the party mainstream consider it too dovish and say it might play into Likud hands by alienating segments of the electorate.

Among its proposals is one whereby West Bank settlements would be either disbanded or transferred to Jordanian sovereignty.

WAGE TALKS

The Histadrut appeared ready to settle for an 11 to 12 per cent increase in basic wages for 1980-81. This was 4 to 5 per cent more than the private employers had offered, but in terms of the employers' overall costs the difference was small, as wages account for a quarter of the employers' overall expenses.

Thus a 4 per cent raise in basic wages would increase total costs by only one per cent. Moreover, management and labour had too much at stake to fight over such small sums, the source told The Jerusalem Post.

Histadrut sources have said that an 11 to 12 per cent increase in basic wages would suffice to protect the real value of workers' income if inflation reaches 120 per cent this year. They based their calculations on the assumption that wage earners will be compensated for 80 per cent of the price rises through quarterly increases in the cost-of-living allowance.

The Histadrut has demanded an 8 per cent increase in basic wages retroactive to April 1 and negotiations over another increase after October 1. The "wage creep" should not be taken into account when calculating the raises required to protect real wages, the Histadrut insists.

Jewish-Arab fight near Western Wall

Several people were slightly injured in a fight that broke out between Jews and Arabs near the Western Wall in Jerusalem yesterday morning.

Eight people were arrested, questioned at the Kishle police headquarters in the Old City, and released on bail.

The fight began when a family from Beit Shemesh brought their son to the Wall for his Bar Mitzva, and parked their cars in a taxi stand used by an Arab taxi company. The taxi drivers then blocked the family's cars and refused to let them out.

One of the Jewish drivers, in an attempt to get past the roadblock, drove into a taxi; and one of the taxi drivers pulled a "Stop" sign out of the ground and started flailing.

Police said about 20 people were involved in the melee. (Itim)

Burglary victim found dead in Jerusalem flat

By ROBERT ROSENBERG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The second murder in Jerusalem in less than a week was reported yesterday by police after family members discovered the bound and gagged body of a 70-year-old former nurse in the bathroom of her Beit Hakerem flat.

Miriam Gittleson was apparently the victim of a burglar. The exact cause of death has not yet been determined.

The woman apparently died between Tuesday and Wednesday, police sources said. She had been a Kupat Holim nurse for many years, and three years ago was widowed when her husband, Dr. Shimon Gittleson, passed away.

No suspects have been arrested yet in the case.

Family members found her body yesterday when they went to the second-storey flat on Rehov Bialik to pick up the woman for a family gathering. A window overlooking a back courtyard was wide open, apparently the entry point for the burglar. It is not yet known what the burglar may have stolen from the flat.

Meanwhile, police sought remand orders for three more suspects in the shooting death of Philip "Pinky" Shulman, who was gunned down early Tuesday by hold-up men in Shulman's Tavern restaurant on Rehov Rivlin.

But the Jerusalem Magistrates Court turned down the request, saying that the court had already given a remand order for the custody of David Peretz, 22, on the same grounds which the police were asking for a remand against the three.

Eyewitnesses reportedly identified Peretz in a lineup, and police said they had made a partial identification of at least one of the three whose remand was rejected yesterday. All three have been released from police custody.

Police have yet to find a second weapon that eyewitnesses reported seeing at the time of the shooting, and police are still studying the first pistol they found, a 9-mm. Baretta which apparently was the murder weapon.

Also yet to be found is the mask worn by the second robber. The police found a dark knitted cap along with the Baretta in Independence Park, and the cap has been identified as one of the masks. The second mask was said to be a yellow and pink pillowcase with eyeholes cut out.

According to eyewitnesses, one of the would-be robbers dropped his gun as he ran out of the Tavern. One of the witnesses ran after the man, and spotted him removing the dark stocking cap to look for the weapon.

Akiva Govrin

Veteran Labourite Akiva Govrin, 78

Akiva Govrin (Globman), prominent Labour Party leader, former cabinet minister and veteran member of the Knesset died on Wednesday night at Ichilov Hospital in Tel Aviv. His funeral will be held on Sunday.

He was active in founding the trade union movement and other aspects of the political and economic life of the country.

Govrin was born in 1902 in Szpikov, Russia, and arrived here as a member of Hehaluts in 1923. Govrin worked first as a stevedore in Haifa and then as a building worker in Jerusalem. In 1925 he founded the Employess Union (clerks and professionals) and organized the defence of Jewish Jerusalem during the 1929 Arab riots.

A member of Ahdut Avoda, he was elected to the Histadrut Executive in 1942 and became the head of the Trade Union Department. A member of Knesset from its inception, Govrin was appointed minister without portfolio in Levi Eshkol's cabinet. In 1964 he became minister of tourism and pushed through a plan for the development of the Dead Sea area.

Govrin resigned his public posts in August 1971, saying that he wished to write his memoirs and that younger people should be given an opportunity to take over the management of the country's affairs.

Govrin is survived by his wife, Malka Belman Govrin, and two sons. (A.Z.)

'Leaks' add fuel to defence budget fire

By HIRSH GOODMAN
Post Military Correspondent

The budgetary battle between the army and the Treasury escalated another notch yesterday, with public allegations and counter-allegations on high living in uniform.

Reeling from a report on astronomical military salaries in yesterday morning's "Ha'aretz," the army last night formulated a long and detailed reply which, among other things, claims that a major-general (aluf) earns only IS8,300 a month, and not IS12,000-13,000 as claimed by the paper's economic columnist.

Tat-Aluf Zvi Shur, the chief of staff's financial adviser, who has taken a key role in the battle against the Treasury's demands for defence budget cuts, said yesterday that "only eight people in the country" could have been familiar with all the details in the "Ha'aretz" report. He made no attempt to hide his suspicion that the leak came from someone in the Treasury.

"Ha'aretz" columnist Shimshon Ehrlich had written that while the basic salary for an aluf was IS8,500 benefits could bring the figure up to IS13,000 a month.

Other basic salaries cited in the article were IS7,600 for a brigadier general (tat-aluf); IS6,200 for a colonel (aluf-mishne); IS4,500 for a lieutenant colonel (sgan-aluf) and IS4,000 for a major. In addition, the article claimed, senior officers enjoy income tax reductions; the right to leave the army with a pension of up to IS6,000 a month at the age of 45, — and retain this pension even if working full-time at another job; large expense accounts — without having to produce receipts; up to IS1,800 a month for serving in front-line areas; additional payments for flying the required 10 hours a month or for having gone through parachute training; financial aid for dental bills, for kindergarten payments and for civilian clothes.

In addition, senior officers are given cars and drivers (below the rank of lieutenant colonel they have to share) and enjoy above-average holiday allowances.

In general, the report states, IDF permanent force members earn 60 to 100 per cent more than their counterparts of equivalent rank in the civil service, taking into account maximum benefits and overtime payments for which directors-general and their subordinates are eligible.

In their defence the IDF last night disputed several of the points raised by "Ha'aretz" (none mentioned above) and claimed that the salary scale reflected the special circumstances under which army personnel were required to work.

This included long periods away from home; irregular hours with no compensation for overtime, shifts or night work; transfers from one position to another, often in different parts of the country, without the right to protest; the tremendous responsibility held by senior officers; and having to live with the constraints of military discipline.

Moreover, the IDF last night pointed out, military salaries were raised by the government in 1978 when the ranks of the permanent force had become dangerously depleted. The government decided that unless the IDF could offer competitive terms — specifically to technical staff — the country's security would be endangered.

They noted that despite the *relatively high salaries IDF per*sonnel enjoy none of the benefits of organized labour. They cannot strike for more pay; they receive no compensation, as did all civilian workers transferred from Sinai; they do not have automatic advancement, and they have no sabbatical fund paid for by the government, as do other civil servants.

The use of military vehicles for private purposes, the army spokesmen claimed, was vastly overstated. Tat-Aluf Shur said last night that an officer serving at headquarters was allocated 180 litres of fuel per month per vehicle, and this had to cover both his private and military needs.

Beyond the figures involved in the budget controversy is the bad feeling developing between the defence establishment and the Treasury, with almost daily leaks to the press by each party to promote its cause. The Treasury is determined to cut another IS200m., beyond the agreed-upon IS700m., from the defence budget, and the army is claiming that this is simply impossible.

"Things have reached a point," one senior officer told The Post last night, "where I doubt whether we will ever be able to work together again. They (the Treasury) have adopted tactics which have left us stunned. We have not been able to respond effectively simply because we never believed that we would have to stoop to the level of public debate that we are encountering now."

Kreisky opposes PLO resolution to destroy Israel

VIENNA (Reuter). — Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky said in an interview yesterday that he could not invite Palestine Liberation Organization representatives to upcoming meetings of the Socialist International.

Kreisky, a vice-president of the International, told the Vienna daily "Die Presse" that he disagreed with a PLO resolution earlier this month reiterating the group's aim of destroying Israel.

"I cannot support an invitation," the newspaper quoted him as saying. "Following the recent resolution in Syria, I'm not for it."

A communique after a PLO congress in Damascus in late May said Fatah, the largest terrorist organization within the PLO, still intended to destroy Israel and establish a Palestinian state.

Kreisky has led three fact-finding missions to the Middle East for the Socialist International. He has been one of the most open supporters of the PLO within the 65-member grouping of socialist and social democratic parties.

The chancellor criticized Israeli authorities for deporting West Bank Mayors Fahd Kawasma of Hebron and Mohammed Milhem of Halhoul in early May, saying the act was "against any democratic principle."

The deportation of the two mayors, who arrived here Wednesday night for a short visit, was "regrettable and grotesque," he said.

Navon invites Soloveitchik to follow his students

By JUDY SIEGEL
Jerusalem Post Reporter

President Yitzhak Navon yesterday extended a personal invitation to Rabbi Joseph Dov Soloveitchik — the dean of modern Orthodox American Jewry — to visit Israel, adding that, "if he came on aliya, it would affect many people."

He issued the invitation through Yeshiva University students who are among 58 religious college students spending two months volunteering in Tel Aviv's Hatikva Quarter and in Safad, Hazor and Migdal Ha'Emek.

None of the young people who met Navon at Beit Hanassi could explain why the 77-year-old eminent scholar and philosopher hasn't visited Israel since the 1930's, even though he encourages his students at the university to do so and has a daughter and grandchildren settled here. The president praised Rabbi Soloveitchik's works as "impressive, brilliant and full of wisdom."

Over 30 of the 300 students who have taken part in Tehiya, the summer volunteering programme in Israel, over the last eight years have come on aliya. It was initiated by a YU rabbi, Heshy Reichman.

Navon praised the programme, asserting that paying attention to the disadvantaged and building their self-image can be as beneficial as providing material aid.

Teddy Kollek gets a bodyguard

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH
Jerusalem Post Reporter

For the first time since assuming office 15 years ago, Mayor Teddy Kollek is being protected by a bodyguard.

The guard was mounted when Kollek returned from abroad last week — at the insistence of state security services, according to an aide. "Teddy didn't want one, but they insisted," the aide said yesterday.

The precaution is presumably connected with the growing atmosphere of extremism in the country and with Kollek's remarks in San Francisco about Prime Minister Menahem Begin's "philosophic responsibility" for the recent bomb attacks on West Bank mayors. The security services apparently are at least as concerned about attacks from Jewish extremists as from Arabs.

Kollek has received one death threat since his return, but the caller did not make a direct link between the threat and the San Francisco remarks. The aide pointedly noted, however, that the threat had been made by a Hebrew speaker.

Furore over proposed road to Negev airbase

By STEVEN ROSENBERG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The government could save IS76m. by not building a 38-km. stretch of superhighway from the Ovda airbase to the outskirts of Eilat, says Eilat Regional Council engineer Sony Siegel.

Public Works Department plans call for a high-quality road in the area. The Israel Defence Forces, according to Siegel, have asked for only a patrol road.

The estimated cost at today's prices for the PWD's proposal is IS89m. The road that the IDF requires costs approximately IS23m., according to Siegel — a difference of IS76m.

The money for the project will come from the Defence Ministry budget, which will pay the PWD to build the road.

According to Ra'anan Fromen, a Nature Protection Society official, the appropriation for the road has not been included in the recent budget cuts. He said that the explanation is that the road will connect the Etzion air base with the new field being built in the north of Eilat.

However, by the time the road is completed, Etzion will no longer be in Israeli hands.

Besides the heavy outlay of cash, the proposed road has a significant number of serious drawbacks, according to Eilat Regional Council member Ze'ev Zorkin.

The road would weaken settlements in the Arava, irrevocably damage the landscape and harm the fragile desert ecosystem, he points out.

The road, he says, makes absolutely no sense — unless several *hundred kilometres of super*highway are built to connect Kerem Shalom with Eilat. Zorkin adds that it is unlikely that a new highway on the new western border will be built considering the nation's economic straits.

The PWD wants to build a 13-metre-wide road suitable for 90 kph. traffic through the desert and unspoiled wadis.

The national head of the PWD, Moshe Shohami, refuses to explain why the road has to be of such high standard.

He claims that the plan has been checked and approved by the IDF and that the road is only meant for the army. Although about IS100m. is about to be spent on the project, Shohami admits he has never visited the area.

Siegel says the reason for the department's desire to build the more expensive road is simple — the department wants to provide as many jobs as possible for contractors and heavy-equipment operators who are currently out of work.

The less expensive patrol road can be built by simply improving the existing unpaved patrol road. The basis for the road already exists from the pre-1967 borders and follows the contour of the land.

Both the local council and the Nature Protection Society recognize the need for a high quality road that can be used by personnel at the airbase and the surrounding

Carter hits USSR as he ends Europe tour

LISBON. — U.S. President Jimmy Carter yesterday ended an eight-day tour of Europe with a stopover in Portugal to praise this country's six-year-old democracy for being among the first to oppose "the threat to democratic societies everywhere posed by aggression in Afghanistan and official terrorism in Iran."

The presidential jet took off from Lisbon's Portelo Airport and was scheduled to land at Andrews Air Force base outside Washington last night.

A joint statement issued after Carter's departure made no mention of a possible expansion of military ties between Portugal and the U.S.

On the international situation, it said the two countries believed that concrete political, economic and commercial measures should be taken against the Soviet Union because of its intervention in Afghanistan, in order to impress on Moscow the need for it to undertake a prompt and total withdrawal of its troops in Afghanistan.

"The Soviet action, in flagrant violation of the UN Charter, seriously threatens international peace and poses a major strategic challenge affecting vital interests in Southwest Asia and the Persian Gulf region," the statement said.

Carter and the Portuguese leaders appealed for the release of the Americans taken hostage in Iran almost eight months ago. Their continued detention would further undermine Iran's international standing, the statement said.

It also reported agreement by the president and the Portuguese leaders that economic sanctions must be maintained against Iran in continuing efforts to secure the hostages' release.

In Madrid, where Carter ended a 20-hour visit earlier yesterday, the Spanish government pledged alliance with the West in the interest of peace.

A joint press statement issued after the visit expressed the two governments' satisfaction over "the excellent level of the ... close and friendly relations between our two countries, as over the convergent viewpoints on a number of international themes."

Diplomatic sources said the Spanish government had hoped for a more formal communique that would criticize France's suggestion for a pause in the enlargement of the European Common Market, which Spain hopes to join in 1983.

Carter openly expressed support for Spain's entry, but the sources said he was not prepared to join in written criticism of the French. (AP, Reuter, UPI)

Mauritius may demand U.S. return key military base

PORT LOUIS, Mauritius (AP). — A bipartisan majority in the 70-member parliament yesterday urged the government to formally demand the return of Diego Garcia, the vital American military base in the Indian Ocean, to Mauritius.

Diego Garcia is a tiny island in the Chagos archipelago. This island group, including Diego Garcia, located 1,280 km. northeast of Mauritius, was ceded to Britain in 1965 before Mauritius received independence from the British crown.

The prime minister said in an interview last month that the understanding at the time of the negotiations was that Britain would use Diego Garcia for a communications station.

Instead, he said, Britain leased the island to the U.S., who now use it as a strategic military base in the Indian Ocean.

It was announced earlier this month that seven converted U.S. merchant vessels with equipment for emergency use by Marine Corps units were being stationed at Diego Garcia. According to unconfirmed newspaper reports, expansion plans for Diego Garcia could involve accommodation for thousands of troops and adaptation of the island runway for B-52 bombers.

In the interview, Ramgoolam said he had "let it be known" to the British that Mauritius wanted Diego Garcia back. On Tuesday, however, the British Foreign Office said in London that Mauritius has "at no stage" demanded this.

The move in parliament came unexpectedly as it was discussing Tromelin Island, a tiny speck of land situated 480 km. to the northwest of Mauritius. Mauritius has claimed the island from France, which has a weather station there.

The leftist Mauritius Militant Movement, which has 30 seats in parliament and which has long sought the return of Diego Garcia, asked that Diego Garcia be formally added to the list of Mauritian dependencies, just after Tromelin Island. The MMM, as it is known here, was joined by the three-seat Mauritian Socialist Movement.

Hanoi FM, in Bangkok, tells Thais clashes will continue

BANGKOK (AP). — Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach yesterday indicated that fighting along the Thai-Cambodian border would continue and accused China and the U.S. of fuelling the conflict between the Thais and Vietnamese.

The Thai supreme military command reported that Hanoi's troops were battling guerrillas of ousted Cambodian premier Pol Pot along a key road and in a hilly stronghold near the frontier.

Low-level clashes or exchanges of gunfire were also reported at two border points.

Thach, in Bangkok on a two-day visit, said in an interview with the Associated Press that Vietnamese and Phnom Penh government forces would try to stop what he said was an "armed repatriation" to Kampuchea of Pol Pot followers from a refugee camp inside Thailand.

Thach denied that Vietnamese troops had entered Thai territory and said the fighting was deliberately provoked by the Thais to get full support for their hardline attitude towards Hanoi from its allies.

Thai Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda, who is also commander-in-chief, referring to Thach's denial of Vietnamese armed incursions into Thailand this week, said "Thailand has all the proof, if he needs it."

In Washington yesterday Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin was summoned to the State Department and asked to urge the Hanoi government "to cease and desist" its military attacks on Thailand. The envoy met for about half an hour with Alan Holmes, Acting Assistant Secretary for European Affairs, at the latter's request.

Department spokesman Tom Reston said U.S. Ambassador Morton Abramowitz made a similar plea in Bangkok earlier in the day to the Vietnamese foreign minister now visiting the Thai capital.

Jew among 14 executed by Iran's 'hanging judge'

KUWAIT (UPI). — Iran's revolutionary government yesterday executed 14 people ranging from army officers accused of plotting to topple the regime to a Jew accused of sexual crimes, the Kuwaiti news agency Kuna reported from Teheran.

The Jew, Jalal Massarrat, was convicted of "producing and distributing heroin, having sexual affairs with Moslem and Christian girls, and becoming wealthy by selling the deceived girls to brothels."

Kuna said the executions — five at first, followed by others later in the day — were ordered by an Islamic court headed by Iran's "hanging judge" Hujat al-Islam Khalkhali.

Among the last were two army officers convicted of belonging to a ring seeking to overthrow the regime of Ayatollah Khomeini, Kuna said. Two others were convicted of stealing arms and attacking police posts.

Quoting Teheran Radio, the agency said two of the men were found carrying 1.073 kilograms of drugs.

A woman was accused of directing the "largest corruption centre, and of having illegal relations with government officials during the shah's regime."

Tibetan Loch Ness monster gulps cows for breakfast

PEKING (AP). — A salt-water lake in northern Tibet may have its own Loch Ness monster, a dinosaur-like creature as big as a house, according to a researcher in geology and ancient life.

Local residents have seen the monster and reported the disappearance of a cow from the lakeside and of a man on the lake on a raft, which sank with him into a whirlpool that suddenly appeared, Chen Tingen wrote in the "Peking Evening News" on Wednesday.

The survival of dinosaurs and other ancient life forms in this lake on the Tibetan highlands is possible, he added. The lake, said to have been part of the ocean 300 million years ago, is warmed by hot springs that bubble up from the lake bottom, and teems with fish which could keep such a creature well fed, he reported.

Chen wrote of visiting Wenbu Lake on a 1976 geological inspection. From Tibet's Shenchia county, 700 kilometres from the Tibetan capital of Lhasa, the seven-member group had to travel six days to reach the 20-kilometre-wide lake, he said. The lake is 4,560 metres above sea level.

A district official of Tibetan nationality told how one morning he and two others saw the monster, with a body as big as a house, a long neck and a small head, Chen wrote.

He said the man also told how he and two others once left a cow tied at the lakeshore and came back later to find it missing, but the beach marked with signs of the cow having been dragged into the water.

Others gave similar descriptions of the monster and told of how the man on the raft had been swallowed in the centre of the lake, Chen added.

'Don't extend NATO east of Suez'

LONDON (UPI). — Britain's former top soldier, Field Marshal Lord Carver, said yesterday he is strongly against extending NATO's frontiers east of Suez and into the Indian Ocean and Far East. Carver, who was chief of the British defence staff from 1973-76, said doing so would divide NATO.

Speaking at a Foreign Affairs Club dinner, Carver said: "From Palestine to Pakistan the West is very vulnerable in an area fraught with dangers. I have no doubt that it is the most likely cockpit for a confrontation between Russia and America, which would almost certainly involve us all."

But he said extension of NATO's present frontiers in Europe and the Mediterranean "could only mean a grave weakening of NATO's prime function of assuring Europe's security without any compensation in strengthening the security and stability of the Middle East and elsewhere, which are important to the security of Western Europe."

African snub for Liberian regime

MONROVIA (AP). — Liberia's two-month-old military regime appeared to suffer a serious setback yesterday in its campaign for international recognition when four African leaders put off a scheduled summit meeting here without explanation.

The presidents of the Ivory Coast, Togo, Guinea and Sierra Leone were to confer with Liberia's head of state, Master Sergeant Samuel Doe, on their possible recognition of Doe's regime.

Liberian authorities said the meeting was postponed for only 24 hours, but diplomats here said the postponement was due to a bitter dispute over whether to accept Liberia's new regime into the African fold.

The streets of Monrovia were still bedecked with the flags of the four nations, and headlines in the government newspaper "New Liberian" yesterday proclaimed: "Rousing welcome for four heads of state as they arrive for talks."

SA admits losing copter to Angolans

PRETORIA. — A South African helicopter was hit by fire from Angolan troops along the border between Angola and South West Africa and the flight engineer was later killed when he and the pilot were attacked by Angolan soldiers, the South African Defence Force said yesterday.

The crew escaped unhurt from the helicopter after it was downed by the fire, the announcement said, but they were later attacked by Angolan soldiers "of approximately company strength." There are about 30 men in a company, according to the South African Press Association.

The Pretoria announcement said the helicopter pilot fought his way through the attackers and reached safety. The flight engineer was fatally wounded in the attack by the Angolan soldiers, the announcement said.

The incident happened two weeks after South Africa announced it had made a massive strike into southern Angola, losing 16 men and killing more than 200 South West African Peoples Organization (SWAPO) guerrillas.

A military spokesman in Pretoria reached later by telephone said the helicopter incident occurred "during this week," but he said he could give no further details. (AP, UPI)

Tear gas disrupts rallies as Bolivian campaigns close

LA PAZ (AP). — Tear gas sent hundreds of Bolivians running from two political rallies a block apart on Wednesday night in downtown La Paz.

No serious injuries were reported and it was not clear who set off the tear gas bombs that exploded near a Socialist party rally at Perez Velasco Plaza.

The tear gas sent some of the socialists running toward San Francisco Plaza, a few hundred metres away, where centrist presidential candidate Victor Paz Estenssoro was holding a similar rally.

Stones were thrown and groups of men carrying clubs scuffled as the gas drove the two groups together.

Riot police backed by dogs charged in and separated the two groups.

The rallies, with some 5,000 persons at each, were planned as a frenetic cap for Sunday's general election campaign. They had bands, fireworks, small hot air balloons and plenty of impassioned political rhetoric.

There are 13 candidates for president, including five former presidents.

Sanjay's ashes to be scattered in holy rivers

NEW DELHI(AP).— The ashes of Sanjay Gandhi, who was killed in a stunt plane crash on Monday, were collected from his cremation site yesterday for immersion in holy rivers and lagoons around India.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi wept when the copper and brass urns carrying the ashes of her son were brought to her home in Sanjay's station wagon by her elder son, Rajiv.

Church updates views on euthanasia

VATICAN CITY (AP). — In a major document on euthanasia, the Roman Catholic Church yesterday set out formal guidelines allowing doctors and the desperately ill to renounce artificial life support.

While reaffirming the traditional Vatican teaching that bans mercy killings and counsels against "intensive use" of painkillers, the document, issued by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith and approved by Pope John Paul II, gives guidelines in the area of extension of life in the light of modern scientific advances.

"When inevitable death is imminent in spite of the means used, it is permitted in conscience to take the decision to refuse forms of treatment that would only secure a precarious and burdensome prolongation of life, so long as the normal care due to the sick person in similar cases is not interrupted," the document said.

"In such circumstances the doctor has no reason to reproach himself with failing to help the person in danger."

A church source explained that the document applies traditional Roman Catholic principles to cases that have developed recently because of the advances of medicine. "It clarifies problems of conscience for people involved in treating desperately ill people," the church official said.

The Vatican said the document was issued, after consultation with experts, to respond to questions raised by a number of bishops conferences.

On painkillers, the document said "it would be imprudent to impose a heroic way of acting as a general rule" and that "human and Christian prudence" suggest for most sick persons medicines capable of alleviating or suppressing pain even though these may cause semi-consciousness and reduced lucidity.

But it said painkillers that cause unconsciousness need special consideration. "For a person not only has to be able to satisfy his or her moral duties and family obligations. He or she also has to prepare himself or herself with full consciousness for meeting Christ."

The document defined euthanasia as an "action or an omission which of itself or by intention causes death, in order that all suffering may in this way be eliminated. Euthanasia's terms of reference, therefore, are to be found in the intention of the will and in the methods used."

Tight security for Basque terrorists

MADRID (UPI).— Following up on its refusal to compromise with Basque terrorists waging an economically damaging anti-tourist bombing campaign, the Spanish government moved 14 Basque separatist prisoners to a new top-security prison.

The 14 were among a group of 19 commandos whose release from jail is demanded by the political-military wing of the Basque separatist organization ETA (Basque Land and Liberty)' as the price for calling off its anti-tourist campaign.

The campaign, the second consecutive summer campaign against tourism by ETA, blasted off Wednesday, as President Carter arrived in Spain, with the explosion of four bombs in Spain's tourist-packed Costa Blanca.

At the same time, terrorists thought to belong to ETA's more radical military wing assassinated the chief engineer of the Michelin Tire Company in the Basque provincial capital of Vitoria.

Luis Hergueta, 52, was the 60th victim of political violence since the start of the year and the 43rd victim of ETA this year.

MATHS. — The Education Ministry has decided to allow pupils to use pocket calculators in matriculation exams in mathematics starting next summer.

Italian terrorists push propaganda—at gunpoint

TURIN (UPI). — Seven left-wing terrorists armed with a sub-machinegun, pistols and grenades stopped a commuter train near Turin yesterday and scattered propaganda leaflets among the passengers, police reported.

The seven, one of them a woman, boarded the small local train as ordinary passengers. But around 20 km. west of Turin they stopped the train by pulling the emergency lever and announced to the commuters they were members of the "Front Line" terrorist organization, a Communist ally of the Red Brigades.

They took the pistol from a policeman who happened to be among the passengers and told the other commuters there would be no bloodshed if they stayed calm.

Then the group scattered mimeographed leaflets explaining the reasons for their political violence, jumped down from the train and escaped in a waiting automobile. The train continued to Turin after a 45-minute delay.

ZIMBABWE. — The Vatican announced yesterday that it has established relations with Zimbabwe at ambassadorial level.

Maoists held for painting UN envoys

NEW YORK (Reuter). — Two Maoists were convicted yesterday of hurling red paint at two delegates in the UN Security Council and the judge denied them bail until slogans painted on the courthouse walls were removed.

A jury deliberated more than an hour before returning guilty verdicts against Steven Yip, 29, and Glenn Gan, 30.

They were accused of throwing red paint at Soviet Ambassador Oleg Aleksandrovich Troyanovsky and U.S. deputy representative William Vanden Heuvel during a Security Council meeting on April 30.

Federal Judge Robert Ward said he would hold both Yip and Gan without bail until July 15, the day set for sentencing, unless they or their followers removed red paint slogans on the courthouse walls.

IN BRIEF

More students slain in Guatemala City

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP). — Two psychology students from the University of San Carlos were kidnapped and assassinated and their bodies found in different parts of the capital on Wednesday, a police source said.

Rightist hit-squads have been kidnapping and assassinating dozens of San Carlos University students, teachers and alumni this year, claiming the campus is a hotbed of leftist guerrilla activity.

Gunmen get £30,000 in London ambush

LONDON (UPI). — Five men armed with shotguns ambushed an armoured security truck delivering £30,000 to a department store yesterday at the height of the morning rush hour.

The men, wearing crash helmets and anoraks, escaped in a delivery van that raced along busy Oxford Street in London's West End.

They struck as two security guards handed wage packets from the security truck to a third guard at a side entrance to the D.H. Evans department store.

Madagascar shows Soviet weaponry

T-76 tanks and three Mig-21 warplanes out of a dozen on order paraded past large crowds and a reviewing stand on which stood President Didier Ratsiraka.

Ratsiraka has said he chose to buy Soviet arms because the Kremlin offered him better terms of payment than western countries, and gave him 12 Mig-21s for the price of six.

Syrian Orthodox patriarch dies

DAMASCUS (Reuter). — Syrian Orthodox Patriarch Agnatius Yacoub III of Antioch and the Whole Orient died here Wednesday night aged 68 after a heart attack, patriarchate sources said yesterday.

Montreal mayor boycotting Moscow

MONTREAL (AP). — Mayor Jean Drapeau, apparently trying to avoid conflict with the Canadian boycott of the 1980 summer Olympics, has decided not to travel to Moscow in July to deliver the official Olympic flag to the International Olympic Committee.

However, the mayor announced yesterday he will send two young athletes as delegates to hand over the flag, which has remained in Montreal in keeping with Olympic tradition since the 1976 summer games.

USS Constellation collides with freighter

MANILA (UPI). — The U.S. Navy aircraft carrier USS Constellation suffered a 5-metre gash above the waterline in a collision in the Arabian Sea with a Bangladesh merchant ship, a Navy spokesman said yesterday.

The spokesman said there were no injuries reported among the crewmen of the 80,000-ton warship of the 7th fleet, which has been operating in the Indian Ocean to support a naval task force deployed there.

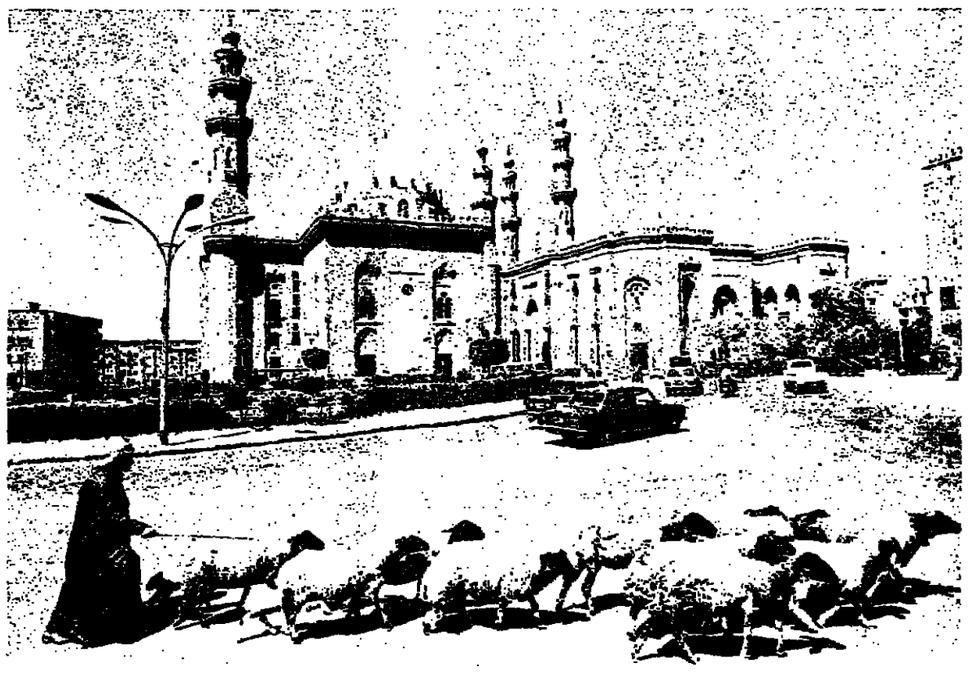
Cairo's new equation

By SEMADAR PERRY/Cairo



(Richard Nowitz)

MENAHEM BEGIN and Israel have a new status in Egypt. They have been transformed from the former enemy who signed a peace treaty with Egypt into a rather unpleasant puzzle for its neighbour.

Israel is no longer viewed here as an annoyance to Egyptian security, and something which can cause President Sadat sleepless nights. Instead, it is being compared to a new tenant in an apartment house, where none of the other residents are very interested in making friends or inviting him in for a chat. The house committee prefers to extract from him his full house dues, and nothing more. The days of pampering the Israeli tenant are over.

In short, the traditional greeting of ahlan wasahlan is being interpreted in its narrowest possible meaning.

THE STRONGEST impression of an Israeli here, as she circulates in the drawing rooms and government offices of the Egyptian capital, is that Egyptians are fed up with the Begin government.

The fact that there are no real negotiations going on at the moment has left Cairenes free to ask a direct question: "When will the Begin government fall?"

In Cairo, the Israeli prime minister is seen as part of an equation — "Begin equals settlement plus intransigency plus endless nitpicking on the Palestinian issue, minus cabinet ministers Dayan and Weizman, plus the ascendancy, and even indirect support, for Geula Cohen."

Where does this convoluted equation lead? The Egyptians have no clear answer, but merely content themselves with a shrug of the shoulders.

If there is any hope for better Israel-Egypt relations in the future, they say here, it can be realized only after the present Israeli government makes room for its successor.

The entry into office of a new prime minister will start a new ball-game. For although Sadat and his closest associates have been appreciative of Israel's strict compliance with the Camp David accords, they are now moving into a much less sanguine frame of mind.

ISRAEL TODAY is being compared with a neurotic patient who is alert only to his personal and private concerns, and obsessed with becoming normal. But Egypt, it is being said here, is not interested in administering the drugs which will bring about a speedy and painless cure. The patient will have to work things out for himself, prove his sanity on his own and bring order to the house which he was given in the heart of the Middle East.

THE ATTITUDE of the Egyptians, a warm and open people who excel in hospitality, is that normalization has become Israel's problem, and only Israel's problem. Egypt is too busy with its own internal problems, and it already treats peace with Israel as almost commonplace.

No one is very excited about peace any more, although almost everyone is happy that there is peace. No one that I've spoken to in Cairo has the slightest desire to put on a uniform again, or to pick up a rifle.

It's like peace has entered the house, but no one has asked it to take off its coat and make itself at home.

THE REAL PROBLEM is normalization. "I'm very sorry, but I do not speak with Israelis," was the first sentence I heard when I telephoned an acquaintance in Cairo.

Mimi Tulimat, the Cairo society woman who is one of Mrs. Jehan Sadat's closest friends, hung up the telephone when I called her. Mrs. Tulimat, a half-sister of author Ihsan Abdel Kuddus, was mentioned last week by President Sadat in his interview with Israel TV as the "one woman" who admitted to voting for the peace treaty, but refused to rent one of her apartments to the Israeli ambassador in Cairo.

□ In Cairo's Dokki quarter, the Israeli embassy begins its working day at an hour which is unusual here — 8.30 a.m. Only this week have air-conditioners been installed, and the machines do a good job of keeping out the oppressive heat of a Cairo summer. Telephones ring constantly, and a melange of Hebrew and Arabic fills the air.

□ Abd e-Sattar Tawilla, diplomatic analyst of "Rose al-Yussuf," wants to interview Ambassador Ben-Elissar. Fuad Eliskandrini, the owner of a furniture store and the father of a well-known singer, continues to maintain contact after the publicized luncheon he held for the embassy staff. Fanny Ashkenazi, Ben-Elissar's secretary, types energetically. Zalman Einav, the Israeli architect who drew up the withdrawal maps, arrives at the embassy and wants to hear what's going on. The embassy's spokesman, Aharon Barnea, scans the headlines of the weekly "El-Siyasi."

□ An incident arising out of a human error by an employee at the Egyptian Consulate in Tel Aviv, and which ended with a letter of apology and payment of all the costs of a round-trip flight from Israel to Egypt, is reported in an Egyptian newspaper in such a way as to attack Israel and Israelis over the visa question.

□ We also learn from reading the papers here that Sana Hassan, the Egyptian journalist who visited Israel several times and in 1976 foresaw the peace agreement, is no longer an outcast among her people. After years of being forbidden to return to her native land, the daughter of Ambassador Mahmud Hassan has been informed that President Sadat has given an order that her passport be returned to her. Bon voyage, Sana. We remember the student strike you organized in the ulpan in Jerusalem against the poor quality of the food being served.

□ Then there is the incident involving an elderly tourist from Israel — a native of Egypt — who came here to see her brother, after 32 years of separation. The woman broke down and ran amok, breaking objects and throwing them about in all directions out in the street. Her brother had her looked after by a local doctor and it was decided that she should be returned to Israel immediately.

But El Al refused to fly the woman home on the grounds that it cannot carry dangerous passengers. The matter came to the attention of the Egyptian Foreign Ministry. Taha Magdoub, the outgoing head of the Department of Normalization, ruled that the woman be flown to Israel within 24 hours aboard a Nefertiti Airlines plane.

□ On the desk of the Israel Embassy spokesman here are two piles of papers: one of local newspapers and another of clippings from the Israeli press. One of the consumers of the latter here in Cairo is the weekly "October," which gives prominent coverage to news from Israel.

□ There are many faces to normalization in Cairo. Every day 15 visas are issued to Egyptians wishing to visit Israel. Their presence is not yet felt in Tel Aviv and Jerusalem as most of them did not get to make the trip so far.

□ A quiet evening in the fashionable Zamalek quarter of Cairo opens with a small story that evokes smiles. It goes like this: Twenty-four years ago an Egyptian Jew immigrated to Israel. Now he has returned to Egypt for a visit. He decides to try his luck, and goes to the bank branch at which he had deposited, in 1956, most of his wealth — in gold and silver — in a safe deposit box. Arriving at the bank, he pulls the key out of his pocket and opens the safe. To his utter surprise, the box contains all the gold and silver he had put into it, with not a penny missing. "My God, could such a miracle ever have occurred in Israel?" he asks.

THE PILSUDSKI SYNDROME

PRIME MINISTER Menahem Begin seems to have been affected by the Pilsudski syndrome ever since he took over the defence portfolio. (Marshal Pilsudski was the military hero of Poland, where the PM spent his formative years, and the marshal was famous for his ornate bemedalled uniforms.)

One example. When Begin chaired his first session at the army GHQ, a prime issue on his agenda was the need to restructure the top army ranks. He was particularly insistent on replacing the chief-of-staff's rank of rav-aluf (major-general) with that of matsbi (marshal), noting how other armies are commanded by marshals and field-marshals, especially the Polish Army, in which he served in World War II. As soon as Begin concluded his peroration, an embarrassed silence descended over the assembled army brass.

SOMEONE in the Begin entourage should curb the boss's penchant for glorious hyperbole, the most memorable of which was pronounced back in 1977: "President Carter is the finest person I have met since Zev Jabotinsky." Now we've heard him laud Chief-of-Staff Rafael (Raful) Eitan, hitherto famous for his taciturnity, as "a veritable Demosthenes." A look at the history books reveals that the Greek demagogue (382 BCE — 322 BCE) used his great gift of oratory to lead Athens to total disaster at the hands of Philip of Macedon.

THE PREMIER must have a special dispensation from on high. There's nothing else that would explain why the National Religious Party and Agudat Yisrael have not mourned at the Sabbath-breaking arrival of his great friend, Geneva bloon Nessim Gaon, by private jet on Saturday noon at Ben-Gurion Airport. Gaon zoomed over, after opening a giant lakeside casino geared to oil sheikhs, not only to coax the Ohalim tent squatters out of the embrace of fugitive-from-bench-justice Sammy Flatto Sharon, but also to rescue Housing Minister David Levy, who was reportedly in a sulk all that weekend.

AS LIKUD fortunes decline in the polls, party tempers rise, and Herutniks threaten to ditch the Liberals, whom they regard as dead weight. Even top Herut bosses like coalition executive chairman Haim Corfu and Knesset faction head Haim Kaufman are arguing for a revision of the parties' balance in Herut's favour. They are haunted by forecasts of the Likud's decline from its 9th Knesset peak of 45 seats to 25 in the 10th. This would leave such Liberals as Gustav Nadian, Yona Deron, Avraham Katz and Menahem Savidor, and possibly Yehezkel Flomin, out in the cold. Begin's resuscitation of the Likud executive with Liberal Deputy Premier Simha Ehrlich as co-chairman, is seen as a last-chance warning to the Liberals to pull up their socks. It remains to be seen whether it heralds their return to "Reb Menahem-Reb Simha" terms, after Ehrlich's failed attempt to put Ezer Weizman in Begin's place.

Meanwhile, Herut organizers like Secretariat chairman Yoram Aridor and information head Giora Gadot are getting the election machinery into gear. Their planning hinges on Begin's ploys — the betting is now that he will try to hang on until the Knesset winter session and, if the government then falls, to stay another six months at the head of a caretaker administration.

FINANCE MINISTER Yigael Hurvitz's much-publicized call at the Ohala home of cousin Moshe Dayan caused antennae to whirl. Hurvitz's Rafi had already announced it was forming its own separate election machinery, on top of which a "Yediot Aharonot" poll gives a Dayan-Weizman list more votes than a Begin-led Likud.

Dayan hasn't committed himself to anyone, but he's not exactly suing anyone who predicts he'll attempt a comeback.

Perhaps Hurvitz should keep in mind Dayan's brinkmanship back in 1977, when he toyed with an independent list containing Mordechai Ben-Porat, Ariel Sharon, Amos Hadar (Hurvitz's brother), Moshav Movement secretary Arye Nehemkin, Manufacturers' Association President Avraham (Buma) Shavit, lawyer Ram Caspi and right-wing industrialist Israel Shenkar. But the moshavniks got cold feet, Dayan temporarily stayed with Labour, and Ben-Porat was left out in the cold.

Incidentally, speculation abounds regarding a centrist list led by Weizman, which might include Shavit, Shai chairman Amnon Rubinstein, lawyer Amnon Goldenberg, Tel Aviv Mayor Shlomo Lahat, and Ramat Gan Mayor Israel Peled.

IT IS DIFFICULT to grasp how a smart lawyer like Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir allowed himself to fall into the trap set so cleverly by Uri Avnery and let himself lose his self-control so completely in the Knesset, when the Sheli MK baited him on his professional involvement in the Kastner case. So far, Tamir has failed to respond to Mordechai Virshubsky's Knesset question, urging him to elaborate on his remark that "one day the truth will out on who really did the murder," which was taken as a swipe at the High Court's upholding of the verdict against the trio found guilty of the murder.

AS THE LABOUR leadership battle waxes fiercer, a new group has appeared — a circle for Haim Bar-Lev as defence minister. Founding members, from the Palmah old-boy network, are seeking to demonstrate that their loyalty to the late Yigal Allon will not transfer automatically to Yitzhak Rabin.

Meanwhile, Rabin has been canvassing for backing in Mapam. The leaders of the junior Alignment partner, like secretary-general Victor Shemtov, have been courteous but non-committal in their replies.

Rabin and friends have been assailing the new group led by lawyer Michael Firon and called "Aleph," an acronym for "Ezrachim Lema'an Peres" (Citizens for Peres), as a counter to unanswered questions about where pro-Rabin groups like Urim get their finances.

Rabin enjoys the support of a wealthy Anglo-Jewish resident of Herzliya, Felix Gordon, who is one of his tennis partners. He paid for the Rabin meeting at the Accadia Hotel for English-speaking persons. About 300 turned up, half the number that came to hear Chaim Herzog address a meeting called by his "Committee of Concerned Citizens," which has mushroomed into 3,000 members all over the land.

A BIG ROW is brewing in the Histadrut, where a struggle is on between trade union head Israel Kessar and organization chief Aharon Harel as to who will head the emerging Labour Party Histadrut election machinery, due to be put into gear after the Histadrut Convention decides next month to advance the General Federation's elections to next summer or early autumn. What makes the outcome so loaded is Kessar's insistence that he be proclaimed successor to Histadrut secretary-general Yerocham Meshel. Harel has gained encouragement from the influential body of 27 labour council secretaries, whose chairman, Tel Aviv labour council secretary Dov Ben-Meir, last week wrote on their behalf to both Meshel and Peres urging that Harel be picked for the job. The latter has proved himself a brilliant election organizer, both of the last Histadrut elections and of the Labour Party's local government election campaign in 1978.

The Kibbutz Hameuhad is already flexing its muscles, even before it unites with Ihud Hakvutzot veHakibbutzim this summer. It has sent a peremptorily phrased message to the Labour Party urging the election of Yitzhak Ben-Aharon as successor to the late Yigal Allon as chairman of the World Union of Labour Zionists.

BUMA SHAVIT has proved himself a master tactician — faced with growing criticism that he has taken too much on as Manufacturers' Association president, chairman of the employers' roof organization and El Al chairman, he raised an unscheduled confidence motion at the association's recent conference, thereby heading off any organized opposition. Only one delegate, Dead Sea Works general manager Arye Shachar took the floor after the rush vote to demand a proper debate on the subject. No timetable has been set for it.

The general public knows little about Arye Grosbard, whom Transport Minister Haim Landan installed recently as director-general in place of transportation specialist Ehud Shilo. Grosbard left Israel for North America in 1950; he lived until nine years ago in Toronto, whence he returned here with an American bride and three children. They have rented the Zahala villa of Ariel and Lily Sharon. Grosbard has been in the aviation business and was associated with El Al for a time. His wife, Florence, is active in the ZOA House play-reading circle.

Another ex-El Al executive who is doing wonderfully well is Bonnie Feinstein, who was Jerusalem town manager before he joined the law office of Knesset law committee chairman David Glass. Feinstein's golden handshake from El Al included free flights for the rest of his life. He may be out of City Hall, but Feinstein still exerts influence. He was instrumental in ousting Avital Mossinsohn from directing the Jerusalem Theatre. The feisty director, who earned wide public support for his success at the theatre and with the Jerusalem Festival, is uncharacteristically going without a fight. Although he has had numerous offers, he is talking of returning to Israel TV, from where he took leave without pay to put the theatre and the festival into shape.

Feinstein is now pushing the candidacy of Ram Ron for Mossinsohn's job. Ron's most recent post was secretary of the Democratic Party, before he fell out with the party chairman, Deputy Premier Yigael Yadin. Prior to that he was secretary of the Citizens' Rights Movement and one of its Knesset candidates, and before that he was involved in arms purchases after leaving the army with the rank of aluf-mishne. He has never had any connection with theatrical or cultural work. The Israel cultural attaché in London, Ram Evron, has opted out of the race.

Institute reunion

By LEAH ABRAMOWITZ/Special to The Jerusalem Post

THEY STREAMED in from all over the country, looking like a cross-section of Israel. And like many Israelis, they greeted each other in a myriad of languages, including even Hebrew. The occasion was the recent reunion of the Institute for Youth Leaders from Abroad (Hamachon l'Madrichei Hutz la'Aretz) and it was celebrating the aliya of the 5,000th of its graduates.

The institute programme is unique in the history of Zionism. According to some, none has been more successful. The institute has been doing its Zionist task under the auspices of the Jewish Agency's Youth and Hehalutz Department for the past 34 years. It has trained some 7,000 youth leaders from more than 40 countries.

A capacity class of 140 potential youth leaders is now studying at the institute. The five-month classroom course includes Hebrew, literature, history, geography and, of course, Zionism. This academic study is followed by five or six months of learning by doing: work in a kibbutz, moshav, development town, Gadna outpost or even community centre.

THE INSTITUTE was far less spacious and plush when I studied there. The old stone, three-storey building on Rehoev Hizkiyahu Hamelech in the Katamon quarter of Jerusalem (behind Beit Elisheva) was then as cold as the grave in winter and as hot as hell in summer, but its large rooms, decorative floor tiles, the little garden off the dining room in the front of the building, made it a pleasant place to study and develop friendships.

The student population too, has changed a great deal since my time. Then, it was exclusively Zionist youth movement members: Habonim, Hashomer Hatzair, Bnai Akiva, Dror and Betar.

Today, the students are the future leaders of Jewish community centres, Reform Judaism youth groups, Young Judea, United Synagogue Youth, Maccabi — and a few members of Zionist youth groups.

A new class arrives at the institute every six months and the latest batch of graduates, the 66th, were the hosts of the recent reunion, which was cosy and nostalgic, as reunions should be.

The day began with informal meetings, the swapping of reminiscences, and catching up on each other's histories since graduation. Some classes were better represented than others, some 10 to 15 a class being the average number attending.

A lot of time was spent comparing notes and commenting on the changes that have occurred over the years.

A picnic supper was served and I noted that at least one thing hasn't changed: they still wash glasses by immersing them briefly in a tub of water. Later, more than a thousand of us sat on the basketball court and were entertained.

We also saw slides of the institute during various periods of its history. The hosts/graduates of the current 66th class put on a lively dance show and choir programme.

THE IDEA of training future youth leaders was born well before the state was established. The first class — in 1946 — consisted of 30 students from South Africa and was housed at the Youth Aliya centre in Nes Ziona. Every subsequent class until 1949 was trained at a different site, sometimes even in empty immigrant camps during the days of the British attempt to keep immigrants out of the country.

During the War of Independence, the institute was housed in the Tadmor Hotel, in the Beit Hakerem quarter of Jerusalem, and members experienced the water and food shortages and mortar shelling during the Arab siege of Jerusalem.

Although no institute students were allowed to serve in the army, they did perform home-guard duties between classes. Similarly, during the Six Day War, the students did volunteer work in settlements throughout the country to help overcome the manpower shortage.

Israel Even-Shushan is the Institute's present director.

Soviet emigre LEV NAVROZOV explains his decision to settle in the U.S. rather than in Israel, while ALEXANDER LIBIN questions the validity of his arguments.

How I became a drop-out

TO SAY IT in officialese: the Moscow-Vienna airliner landed in Vienna and we disembarked. To say it in our own language, which no one who has not had a similar experience will understand: we escaped from the world in which we seemed destined to live and to die, and here we were beyond, like that man in the medieval engraving who pulled up the celestial canopy of the universe and thrust his head outside.

We took several uncertain steps towards the terminal building when a smallish man who looked like a Moscow warehouse manager, with one shoulder lower than the other, suddenly appeared. He was the representative from Israel.

I stepped forward and made a speech on behalf of myself, my wife, my mother and my son. We wanted Israeli citizenship immediately, at the airport; we planned to take the next plane to the United States, where Harper & Row would publish the seven volumes of my book.

Later, I was ridiculed for my naiveté. One cannot acquire Israeli citizenship on Austrian soil. But why not? Several months before our departure from that universe we had secretly planned a desperate venture. One hundred of us would adopt Israeli citizenship in Moscow and announce this to the world. If that was possible on Gorky Street, Moscow, why was it impossible at Vienna's airport?

MY ARGUMENT with the Israeli officials began. But it wasn't exactly an argument. I did all the talking. They listened, sighed or smiled kindly, as one does when a precocious child says something sensible yet unrealistic.

Excuse me (I argued against their sighs and smiles), but Gogol, an intensely Russian writer, lived in Italy. No one even knew why. And that was under Nicholas I. Why can't an Israeli writer live in the U.S.? Why this odd official Israeli attitude to "soil" in the literal sense? Surely today, with aircraft, satellite television, telephones, and so on, the concept of "soil" must be more, and not less, sublimated in Israel than it was in Russia in Gogol's time, the first half of the 19th century? Jews were accused of being "divorced from soil" — that is, of being mostly musicians or scientists, and only rarely farmers, such as Lev Trotsky's father.

Well, in the U.S. the number of college students surpassed the number of farmers many years ago. To hell with the moth-eaten concept that only Trotsky's father and his kind created the real values, while the Albert Einsteins "merely ate their bread."

The parents of these Israeli officials must have read too much of the later Tolstoy. Or were they social revolutionaries in Russia of the kind that would pick up a lump of earth and chew it tearfully? In my family there were 24 generations of rabbis: show me the text that says one cannot become an Israeli aboard a space ship, for example, where there is no earth under foot to pick up and chew?

I ALSO approached the issue from another angle. Sad as it might be, the destiny of Russia was not decided in Italy, where Gogol lived; but the destiny of Israel is being decided in the U.S.

"In what sense?" an Israeli official inquired politely.

"In the sense that the Soviet global war machine is planning the seizure of the Middle East, with or without any aid from the Arabs."

Seven years ago, this sounded very wild. Until 1976 the CIA declared annually that the Soviet Union was a peaceful society. In 1979, the American president could still kiss Brezhnev in Vienna. It was conveniently forgotten that the Vietnam war and the Yom Kippur war were Soviet wars by proxy.

No wonder these Israeli officials smiled wanly seven years ago when I said that the emperor had no clothes. The child was too high-strung. Precocious children often are.

"Do you mean," I persisted, "that Israel can be defended without the U.S. against the Soviet war machine?" I began to describe the scale of Soviet war preparations, something not understood in the U.S. even today. (Late in 1978, a top American expert on Russia declared, in response to my article "What the CIA Knows About Russia," that my mind "had been traumatized by my suffering in Russia.") Anyway, I clinched my argument: "An effective journalist, writer, intellectual may be of infinitely greater value to Israel in the U.S. than in Israel."

Possibly in order to stop my lecturing, the Israeli officials drove us to HIAS headquarters, to arrange for our journey to America.

HAVE I BEEN of any use to Israel during my stay in the U.S.?

In 1977, a faction of the growing American Conservative Party invited me to lecture on "How the West Can Survive." I did not so much as mention Israel in my talk. But when the question period began, an imposing professor stood up and recited by heart a "list of the crimes of Israel against the Arab countries." When he finished, three rows (the second, third and fourth, for the first was occupied by the guests of honour) applauded loudly. So the demonstration had been planned beforehand. The rest of the audience watched with approval or curiosity.

The professor was none too original either. Just then, (October 17, 1977) "U.S. News and World Report," America's "most authoritative, sound, and objective political journal" with the largest circulation in the country, described Israel as a brutal, fanatical, near-sighted tyranny.

My defence of Israel came immediately. I convinced the audience that it was in their interests to protect Israel, and that it would be consistent with their world-view (they were conservative supporters of Western democracy and of the survival of the U.S. as a Western democracy).

When I finished, the audience, including rows two to four, applauded. As for the "list of the crimes of Israel against the Arab countries," it had long been lost in the audience's laughter.

"U.S. News and World Report" also received its share of my sarcasm, for I specialize in ridiculing the mendacious provincialism of the American mass media.

MR. NAVROZOV deserves to be applauded. He, at least, unlike so many of his fellow drop-puts, does not tell us that he will help Israel by raising money for it. I am quite sure that Navrozov as a self-appointed representative of Israel does his job much better than the many Israeli officials abroad, to say nothing about the innocent Jewish Agency clerk in Vienna who looks like a Moscow warehouse manager and had to withstand Navrozov's verbal attack.

I am very close to Navrozov in his contempt of the Tolstoyan-populistic concept of "soil" as well as of the Physiocratic-Smith concept of "productivity." But if there is no need to set one's foot on this land (or "soil") to feel like an Israeli patriot and benefactor, and if the only item needed to complete this sentiment is an Israeli passport, then why do we need this tiny plot of land at all?

We can once again form a sort of spiritual brotherhood, just as 24 generations of distinguished rabbis did so successfully before our arrival in this world. It is all so painless and easy; the people of the world would applaud us at last.

I DON'T NEED to be convinced of the paramount importance of U.S. military power or of the need to foster U.S. political will and consciousness, although I am sure that the destiny of Israel is decided in Israel. I am also ready to join Navrozov, as well as Begin, in their belief in Israel's military value for the U.S. However, here one enters the domain of expediency and expediency, by definition, is only temporary. One must look for another and more profound answer to the tricky question, "Why Israel?" which transcends the limits of expediency. Maybe the fate of Israel is a paradigm of the fate of Western civilization?

By going to the U.S. through the good offices of HIAS, Navrozov has undermined the very raison d'être of the existence of this State whose citizenship he is keen to acquire. I assume that he was allowed to enter the U.S. as a political refugee. What is meant by the term "Jewish refuge" when one has an entry permit to a free Jewish State? Conversely, what is the meaning of a free Jewish State when Jewish refugees continue to exist and even to increase in number? These two notions are incompatible and this incompatibility constitutes the greatest moral danger to the Jewish State.

Immigration to the U.S. is nowdays greater than ever in recent times. There are Italian, Irish, French and other immigrants. Does anybody hear about Italian, Irish or French "refugees"? Certainly, there are Vietnamese and Cambodian refugees.

By entering the U.S. as a political refugee, Navrozov equates Israel with Vietnam, although he would no doubt vehemently deny this assertion.

As a political writer and thinker who studied the U.S. for 20 years while still in Moscow, Navrozov knows that the immigration quota for different groups was a highly political question throughout U.S. history. He no doubt understands that the allocation of a quota of 4,000 visas a month for Jewish refugees from Russia, who have entry visas to the free State of Israel, is a purely political act. Moreover, it is an act of discrimination against that free state. Would it not be so regarded by Italy, France or West Germany were the U.S. government to make a similar allocation in their case?

As a political writer and thinker Navrozov can assess better than I the reasons for this action on the part of the American administration as well as the damage done to Israel.

The author immigrated to Israel from the Soviet Union and is active in the aliya movement.

A spiritual brotherhood?

By ALEXANDER LIBIN

Secure boarders

The Post's SHALOM COHEN surveys the conditions that are necessary for the government's fall from power.

THE TIME has come to restate Israel's strategic policy aim and bring theory into line with practice. The reformulation should read: "The right to the recognised security of the boarders."

No, the last word is not a misprint. The word "boarders" refers to Herut's partners in government. "Security" refers to the safety of the "Boarding House," the coalition government.

These partners, the DM, NRP, Liberals and Rafi, bear the heavy responsibility for whether the present government runs its full term. Their choice is either the insecurity of leaving the Boarding House or the future security of the country.

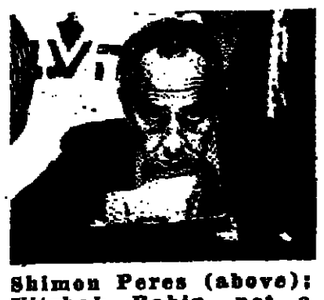
But the real burden of responsibility could well be Labour's.

An early change of government depends on the interaction of two forces — push and pull. The push is provided by the centrifugal forces inside the disunited coalition, whether this push derives from concern by factions and members for their political futures and careers, or from genuine concern for the country's good, the effect is the same.

The pull comes from Labour, the prospective bosses of a new Coalition. That is, barring a change of government by reshuffling the present one.

Both push and pull are needed to move Herut's vacillating coalition partners. For some, the pull, in the form of "inducements" could be decisive. Hence, the final outcome might well rest with Labour.

The question is whether Labour is in a hurry. Or whether the Labour party, because of internal troubles, considers it more politically expedient to wait for the government's self-disintegration without providing the pull of "inducements".



Shimon Peres (above); Yitzhak Rabin...not a difference of ideology. (IPPA, Passow)

UNFORTUNATELY, the clocks of the politicians and parties are not synchronised with the national interest clock. After the U.S. presidential elections in November, a cold wind is expected to blow in from Washington. Prime Minister Begin is evidently prepared to sit out the autonomy talks until then (or even indefinitely), taking his cue from a very willing Sadat, though to what purpose is characteristically obscure.

Does Labour also favour sitting it out? It is now unlikely, though still not impossible, that Labour will give that extra shove and bring about a change of government before the cold wind reaches us. More so, since Labour is preoccupied with its own leadership struggle.

Some critics of the government, wishfully thinking, see the government falling any day now. This is not certain. Neither is it certain that the Herut-led government will not run its full term for another 14 months. Despite the recent defections by individual coalition supporters, some parliamentary observers do not exclude the possibility of the government carrying on to the bitter end. One may even predict that if the government survives until November, the anticipated external pressures on Israel will rally the public around the Government.

One factor working for the government are the stresses inside the coalition parties. For a coalition partner like the NRP, leaving the government could split the party, as a result of the Gush Emunim-Herut alliance of which the NRP, including its reluctant elder statesman, Yosef Burg, has become captive. Yet NRP leaders must also know that the party's future is secure, plus or minus a mandate or two, because the NRP can safely return to its constructive historic partnership with Labour.

The Democratic Movement is even riper to fall from the tree. The party chief, Yigael Yadin, remains in the cabinet out of some sense of loyalty to the prime minister, which is disloyalty to those who voted for him. He says he has no reason to believe that Labour would be any better.

The Liberal "boarders" are in a bind and probably stuck with the Likud, out of fear for their own electoral prospects. The Liberals position was fixed at the Kfar Maccabiah conference, where Ehrlich, who for the past year has been saying how disastrous this government has been, emerged as apologist for that same government. This symbolises the true state of Liberal Party pragmatism. If necessary, the Liberals might be prepared to consider Labour overtures for defection, if the terms were right.

The remaining faction in the coalition, Rafi, being itself a defector from Labour, the possibility of "pull" from Labour is lessened by Labour disunity.

AFTER THREE years, the Begin led government has proven itself incapable of serving as custodian of the national fate. It has proven worse than the worst of the labour governments. The argument used by the government's last-resort defenders, namely, that Israel's major problems are caused by outside forces beyond our control, only makes an early change of government more imperative. Were it not for these outside forces, we could afford to keep Labour in the wilderness until it learned the lessons of its fall from power three years ago.

Apart from the economy, our most burning problem is how to halt the erosion of possibilities for coexistence with the Arabs across the "Green Line," and with Israeli Arabs who are becoming increasingly nationalist, and how to guarantee the future of the Israel-Egypt peace.

The Labour Party can be viewed schematically as a trinity of Peres, Rabin, and the rest. Rabin thinks he should be restored to the premiership from which he was ousted by Peres. Their feud is not about programme or ideology. It has been said that Rabin doesn't favour early elections because they would be in Peres' interest. More's the pity for Rabin if he has to be sacrificed on the altar of the national interest.

The Labour leadership, including Peres and Rabin, ought to be concentrating on a single point: how to wean away coalition dissidents. It could miss the bus, because the present government despite its slim Knesset majority, has more tangible prizes to offer faint-hearted partners than does a divided Labour.

The situation inside Labour does not facilitate winning over allies from the Coalition. To do so means offering "inducements" in the form of portfolios and the like, and these are likely to be at the expense of aspirants in the party.

An early change of government entails sacrifice, not only by Labour's prospective partners, but also by Labour itself, by Mapam, and by the smaller factions to the left of Labour. A future Labour government will want a broad-based coalition in anticipation of the onslaught from an opposition containing Herut and Gush Emunim.

The prognosis is that Labour will wait for the government to fall under its own weight, allowing Labour to continue with its own politicking.

A note of caution needs sounding for the sake of our democratic way of life. Mr. Begin has lately taken to talking about an "atmosphere of putschism" which he claims to detect in opposition groups of all complexions. The implied warning is that taking to the streets can boomerang after a change of government. It is more urgent than ever for Labour and its allies to respond effectively and responsibly.

THE ISLAMIC BOMB

The Middle East is madly racing towards full nuclearization. And the first to acquire nuclear weapons will, in all probability, be Muammar Gaddafi's Libya, warns MOSHE SHARON.

WHILE WESTERN governments, politicians and journalists have been sitting back and enjoying the largest bluff of this century embodied in the slogan "the Palestinian problem is the heart of the Middle Eastern conflict," the real problems have been ignored.

But the day of reckoning is near. The Middle East is madly racing toward full nuclearization. And the first to acquire nuclear weapons will, in all probability, be Muammar Gaddafi's Libya.

And there is more than one indication that the Libyan leader will not hesitate to use the bomb once he has acquired it.

The two first possible targets for the Libyan bomb are Egypt and Israel.

Since coming to power in September 1969, Gaddafi has dreamed of acquiring nuclear weapons. This, he thought, would more than balance the deficiencies of his small army and give his warlike threats a potent force. When he learned that atomic weapons were not yet obtainable in the free market, he decided to help make one which, besides its radioactivity, would also have another important characteristic: it would be an Islamic Bomb.

Gaddafi sent the hundreds of millions of dollars needed for the research and for the radio-active material to Pakistan, where the work is nearing completion.

WHAT DOES this Libya-Pakistan axis mean? Is it only accidental that these two countries are engaged in an adventure which may prove the deadliest of our century?

Is there significance in the fact that Pakistan, always the most anti-Israel of the Islamic countries, is cooperating with the most venomous of all the Arab enemies of Israel? Or is it simply a convenient marriage of skill and money?

The future student of the history of the "Islamic" bomb will find all these elements relevant to the Pakistan-Libya partnership. In addition, of all the countries that came into being as a direct result of the withdrawal of Western colonialism from Central Asia, North Africa and the Middle East, Pakistan and Libya are probably the most artificial.

Born out of the convulsions of the last years of the British rule in India, Pakistan since its birth has been a thorn in the side of its giant neighbour. Unless a miracle happens, many observers believe that it will be re-incorporated, wholly or partly, into India. With the Russians now firmly established in Afghanistan, the possibility of Pakistan being partitioned between India and the Soviet Union is not unthinkable.

Libya, similarly, is the creation of latter-day Italian colonialism. It has even fewer historical roots than Pakistan. Historically speaking, at least as far as Islamic history is concerned, the natural situation would be the annexation of eastern Libya up to Cyrenaica by Egypt, and Western Libya by Tunisia.

Muammar Gaddafi. (Camera Press)

THESE HARD FACTS are not unknown either to the Libyan or Pakistani rulers. The solé way they see of stopping the absorption of both states by their neighbours, is the bomb.

If Pakistan and Libya become nuclear powers, the balance of power in the Indian sub-continent, indeed in the whole of Central Asia and North Africa, will be completely changed.

The huge quantity of money available and the abolition of the long-standing embargo which the nuclear powers had imposed on the sale of atomic weapons, make it more than likely that within five years every Arab state in the Middle East will have the bomb.

And the nature of the Arab-Israeli conflict will change radically. However, before this happens, the acquisition of nuclear weapons by Libya poses grave probabilities: Gaddafi can use this weapon to impose a change of regime in Egypt so as to ward off any Egyptian threat and to resume the state of war against Israel.

UNDERNEATH it all lies the burning ambition to lead the Arab world in the name of puritan Gaddafi's "Green Book" Islam.

If Egypt attacks Libya before the bomb reaches Tripoli, the Egyptians will have to consider both Russian and Algerian reaction. If they try to do the same after the acquisition of the bomb, there can hardly be a question that Gaddafi would use it on Egypt, with disastrous consequences for the whole area.

Alternatively, Gaddafi, who since 1977 has become the No. 1 protector and "godfather" of the Palestinian terrorist groups, may offer nuclear weapons to his protegés to hold the whole world at ransom until their demands are fulfilled.

Since the world accepted the legitimacy of terrorism, the door has been wide open to its unlimited development, including the use of nuclear weapons. Had the Western world hit hard at Libya when it first provided a refuge for terrorists or when it sent its professional murderers to "execute" dissidents in Europe, it would not have been in the situation it is in today.

The acquisition of nuclear weapons will undoubtedly even further strengthen Gaddafi's internal position and elevate him to the position of an Islamic hero. For it should be remembered that while the consequences of possessing, let alone using, nuclear weapons are far from being understood by the masses, everybody knows that it means power, influence and above all honour.

In a shame-oriented society, like the Arab society, honour based on power is of great value.

This is how the acquisition of the bomb has been described, and this is how it will be understood. It is a source of pride no less than a source of security and a tool of political and military blackmail.

MEANWHILE, the acquisition of the bomb by Pakistan should be regarded with the utmost concern by India. True, the Pakistanis will be far more reluctant to use their bomb, but its mere existence would spell danger for India. At least this is how India can present the case.

Israel and the U.S. should be alert to a complete change in the military and political conditions in the area. The sudden appearance of nuclear weapons in the hands of Israel's enemies calls for re-evaluation of the peace treaty with Egypt and, particularly, the autonomy plan. All signs indicate that the acquisition of nuclear weapons by a country like Libya has anti-American overtones — in addition to the immediate threat it poses to Israel.

With such destructive power in the hands of the Rejectionist states, and with the possibility of Egypt succumbing to the Libyan atomic threat, the American interests in the area will be under even greater threat, with only Israel to back them.

The Russians do not have to worry because the Arab and Islamic states know better than to test either their military power or moral values in international relations. Despotic and authoritarian regimes have always understood each other very well, irrespective of whether the despotism was red, brown or green.

STRANGELY ENOUGH, the natural alliance in a confrontation with Libyan nuclear lunacy is the alliance between Israel and Egypt. But such an alliance, which could have also been significant in terms of the Soviet strategy in the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean areas, has been completely obstructed by American policy, which has resulted in the weakening of Israel and in its presentation by the American media as a burden and not as an important strategic asset. The emergence in U.S. circles of Egypt as the most important U.S. ally in the region will cost America dearly.

Israel should concentrate on trying to bring to the attention of the American administration and public alike the anticipated new conditions that will emerge from the nuclearization of the area. The aim should be a demand to ease pressure on Israel, particularly in matters concerning a further legitimization of the PLO, either directly or through accepting the Egyptian views about autonomy.

Notice to Non-profit, Volunteer Welfare, Health and Educational Organizations

A Directory of Israeli non-profit, non-government volunteer services and organizations is now being prepared for distribution to potential philanthropists and contributors in North America and other English speaking countries.

The purpose of the Directory is to let foreign donors know of these organizations so that they may contact them directly for further details and offer financial support if they so desire.

Nearly 2,000 questionnaires have already been sent out. If your organization fits the criteria for listing, we will include it in the Directory without any fee for this service.

If you have not yet received a questionnaire, please send a post-card to:

The Israel Guide to Non-profit Social and Volunteer Services
37 Gaza Road, Jerusalem (Tel. 02-637450)

Organizations which receive the questionnaire and do not fill it out will be listed (name and address only) in the Directory, with a notation that the questionnaire was not returned.

THE PUZZLE OF THE POLLS

TELEREVIEW
Philip Gillon

DISRAELI once commented: "There are three kinds of lies: lies, damned lies and statistics." Public opinion polls had not been invented in his day or he might have added a fourth — the category of terminological inexactitudes, as Churchill called deviations from the truth. Polling the public can be as misleading as statistics.

I realize that my criticism of the accuracy of public opinion polls is liable to provide comfort and solace to supporters of Prime Minister Menahem Begin, who advise their champion that he need not take the slightest notice of reports that an overwhelming majority of the population think that the time has come for him to abandon politics and to write his memoirs.

But I must tell the truth, let the chips fall where they may — I do not make prejudices of my principles, even if the result is that I agree with Mr. Begin in the matter of opinion polls.

These reflections are inspired by a commentator's announcement during the news one night that a poll had confirmed the wisdom of Television House's boycott of the European soccer matches, covered so fully by Jordan. The pollsters had telephoned 185 people on Sunday night, when Israel was showing the Jerusalem Betar soccer side on "Second Look" and Jordan was showing the final between Germany and Belgium. These 185 people had been asked what they were looking at. Forty per cent were watching Israel TV, 19 per cent were watching Jordan, 38 per cent were looking at each other and not at television, and the rest were noncommittal.

Ergo, implied the newscaster smugly, Israel Television was right in its choice of programme: it was pleasing the public.

THE POLL, of course, was as dishonest as the old legal question to the husband in the divorce action, "Have you stopped beating your wife? Answer yes or no." The obvious question to have asked — if Television House really wanted to know that the public wished to see — was, "What programme would you have preferred us to put on? 'Second Look' about Jerusalem Betar or the Germany-Belgium soccer final?"

There were many imponderables invalidating the honesty of the poll. The Jordanian telecast was in Arabic, not in Hebrew or even English, although there were occasional comments in delightful Scottish by somebody whom I assume to be the Jordanian national coach. Still, one has to be a real soccer fanatic to watch a broadcast in a language one does not understand at all.

Secondly, the reception from Jordan, particularly on Channel Six, has been very indifferent of late.

Thirdly, could every one of the 185 polled get Jordan on his set?

Had I been polled, I would have answered that I was braving the stars and stripes of poor reception, and was listening without comprehension to the commentary in Arabic. In passing, I must say that I think it is very provincial of the Arabs to talk Arabic instead of Hebrew or English. But I am notoriously tolerant to a fault; not many other Israeli Jews would put up with such chauvinism on the part of the Jordanians, and would go on watching a soccer match in the wrong tongue.

Israel Television's contempt for sports lovers is so great that we were given only 30 minutes live telecast of our own national team's game against Sweden. I suppose there were excellent financial reasons for this neglect; lack of budget nowadays covers a multitude of omissions throughout the national life. But it was a pity.

They do find the money somewhere to give us all the basketball games in Europe, so surely they could squeeze out a little money for football?

JACK MANSELL seems to have instilled the Israeli national team with a quality they have not had for years — the ability to fight back when a goal down. Hitherto, our sides have had their tails instead of the ball between their legs. I trust that Mansell's present problems with some members of the side will disappear.

Now is the time for soccer watchers of the world to unite, and to demand from the moguls who run the sport that something should be done to prevent bunker defences by teams that have a lead of one goal, as was done, for instance, by Nottingham Forest against Hamburg.

The present redress for fouls outside the penalty area or for corners are woefully inadequate: I am sure that only one such free kick or corner out of hundreds is converted into a goal.

This emphasis on bunkers is killing the sport from the spectator's point of view and is putting a premium on deliberate offences.

I must hand it to the members of the German team that they did not play in this shoddy way against Belgium, after getting a lead, and a very thrilling game resulted, which they deserved to win. By 1982, I venture to prophesy, they will have another very great side reminiscent of the wonder team of the early Seventies.

While Jordan gave us this feast of soccer, Israel showed us a basketball game between Philadelphia and Los Angeles. One curious aspect of the telecast was that we could hear how vividly the Americans broadcast basketball, providing a mixture of exciting comment, insights about personalities, and shrewd analyses of the plays.

I hope that our local commentators were listening and learning how to do such things instead of just giving us the names of the players handling the ball, which we know anyway.

MY COLLEAGUE on The Jerusalem Post, Hirsh Goodman, had a rather tough passage in his interview on "Meeting for Two" with Susan Harris, creator, writer and producer of "Soap."

He had obviously done an enormous amount of homework and was armed to ply the lady with shrewd questions, in the way that the Queen of Sheba tested King Solomon. To most of his questions she answered either "yes" or "no."

I imagine that there are times when a man likes a woman to give a crisp, monosyllabic response to a certain inquiry, but a discussion on television about the principles of how "Soap" is made is not such a time.

Nevertheless, Goodman battled on bravely, and deserves full marks for effort. I could not help contrasting Susan Harris's performance with that of Jane Fonda on the news, when she was asked about film-making by students at Tel Aviv University. Jane Fonda used hands, eyes and face to give very vivid, dramatic and profound answers.

The Harris interview was also marred by poor photography; the cameraman failed to do justice to her good looks. She looked far better in the shots of her taken at a news conference.

I was shocked to learn from her that "Soap" is often deliberately serious. As a result, the episode that followed was rather unsatisfactory, particularly a dreary and laboured scene between Tim and Corinne.

David Garrick commented about Oliver Goldsmith, "He wrote like an angel, but talk'd like poor Poll." Maybe it is better not to get to know creators of series we love, so that we can preserve our illusions intact. On the other hand, I certainly found Susan Harris worth seeing at her press conference.

ELI NISSAN'S "Free Admission," devoted to the plight of single men and women in Israel's marriage-obsessed society, gave me a very curious feeling of déja vu. Had we not been through exactly the same programme, about the same subject, with the same people, some time ago?

Anyway, whether it was new or a repetition, I found it very interesting. Several of the women were very bright and attractive, and a superficial observer might have wondered why they remained on the shelf.

They gave the answer, very clearly, and also insisted that they did not mind their condition as much as parents and friends thought they should. One teacher told us that even one of her pupils said that he was very worried about her.

Single men also suffer in Israel: there is no envy of them, as there is elsewhere in the Western world, because they are free to live high, wide and handsome. Everyone thinks that all bachelors must be miserable wretches, and that there must be something physically or emotionally wrong with them, rendering them incapable of achieving the marital and parental states deemed by Israelis to be the acme of bliss.

Even the high divorce rate, we learned, does not undermine the nation's passionate disbelief in the old proverb, "Who marries does well, who marries not does better."

I am enjoying immensely Charles Darwin's remarkable trip on "The Beagle," although it reminds me of another of Dr. Johnson's epigrams, his definition of man: "The more I see of man, the more I like dogs." Many of the human beings with whom Darwin has contact are so unspeakable that we feel ashamed for humanity, as in this week's episode, during which we saw the gaucho solution for taking over the Indians' land — emptying the areas by extermination.

On the other hand, all the animals Darwin studies and the objects he collects are a delight. He himself is a real treasure.

I am finding the Friday night serial "Family Affair" good, but not over-exciting. Barry Foster still looks and performs so much like Dutch policeman Van der Valk acting the part of a British executive that it is hard to accept that he is really out of a job. The script is written by N.J. Crisp, who wrote most of the scripts for "The Brothers," and there are many echoes of the Hammonds.

MY PRIZE for the best question of the week goes to the newsman who, with a straight face, asked Begin aid Mattityahu Shmuelevitz, who drew up the 13-page memorandum of the Government's wonderful achievements, why he had omitted Israel's feat of leading the world in the inflation stakes.

Dinah Shore (Unipix)

Billy Crystal (Braun)

Caravan of stars

BILLY CRYSTAL, better known as Jodie Dallas in the television series "Soap," is coming to Israel next week with Dinah Shore, the film and TV personality. They are part of a 150-member caravan, headed by Dinah Shore and arranged by the West Coast region of the American Friends of the Hebrew University.

Dinah Shore will perform at a benefit concert in the Jerusalem Theatre on Thursday, July 3, with all proceeds going to the Hebrew University Student Aid Fund. Among other stars who will perform in Jerusalem with Dinah Shore are singer Jan Peerce and the Russian-born Israeli pianist Yefim Bronfman. Israeli performers at the show include Yehoram Gaon and the Jerusalem Symphony Orchestra.

In real life, Billy Crystal, 32, is married and the father of a four-year-old daughter. He was born in New York City and is a graduate of New York University, majoring in television and film directing. As a comedian, he has appeared on "The Tonight Show," "Dinah," "The Mike Douglas Show," "That Was the Year That Was," and "All in the Family." He is best known, however, for his role in "Soap."

Dinah Shore will be in Israel from July 1 to 7 to make three shows. They will be telecast coast-to-coast in the U.S. on more than 250 TV stations, as well as in Australia and in Hongkong for an estimated viewing audience of over 20 million.

The Jerusalem Friends of the Hebrew University, who are sponsoring the benefit performance on July 3, hope to raise more than IL1m. for student scholarships. The show is under the co-patronage of the U.S. Ambassador and Mrs. Samuel Lewis and the president of the Hebrew University and Mrs. Avraham Harman.

Exciting week

MUSIC
Yohanan Boehm

A MARATHON of seven events ... and, amazingly, everything went off according to schedule. The Jerusalem Proms opened with the pompous "Fireworks" by Handel, ending a week later with dancing to a jazz band. And in between there was something for everyone — a Mahler programme, one dedicated to Iberia, another to Baroque music, and yet another to Beersheba. There was a theatre-plus-orchestra evening ("Every Good Boy Deserves Favour," by the Caimeri Theatre and the JSO), and an evening of "Americana."

The new Proms feature was also outstanding — the participation of three fine municipal youth bands (Beersheba, Kiriat Ono, Jerusalem), two sweet children's choirs from Jerusalem, and the excellent Israeli Mandolin Ensemble under Moshe Jacobson. All gave the Proms a special cheerful and colourful note.

Two dance ensembles and the Negev Workshop of "Bimat Hakibbutz" added another dimension, as did the late-show readings of letters, poems and underground songs from Russia.

The week brought many new faces to the Jerusalem Theatre and the hall was generally filled to capacity. For an old concert-goer like me it was heartwarming to see so many new faces, so many young couples and teenagers, and to experience the relaxed atmosphere and the friendly mood that prevailed throughout.

Gary Bertini and Yehuda Fickler, moving spirits behind this week of Proms, should be highly commended for their planning of so many varied and contrasting programmes, and for the flawless (and punctual) execution of every detail in these rather complex arrangements.

All the staff involved — of the Jerusalem Theatre and the Symphony Orchestra emerged from the gruelling test with honours, as did other participants.

Fittingly, the week's climax came at the end: for the American evening (Wednesday, June 25), Gary Bertini led his orchestra through the swingy, syncopated music of Gershwin and Bernstein with relentless drive and incisive movements. All to great effect. Jonathan Zak, the soloist in Gershwin's Concerto in F, gave an excellent display of his digital brilliance, his unerring sense of rhythm and his easy grasp of the musical content.

The concerto, though a bit laboured in parts, was so full of good vintage Gershwin and was given such a devoted rendition by the pianist and the conductor that the inherent weaknesses of the work were overshadowed by the exciting performance.

For the Bernstein excerpts from "West Side Story," two most suitable singers were presented: Yona Yellin, a former American soprano now living on a kibbutz, and English light baritone Peter Savidge.

For the "I Feel Pretty," three women's voices (Ann Allen, Dina Adreon, Marianne Prager) assisted to very good effect, and the song had to be repeated.

The Symphonic Dances from the same musical made a noisy, but impressive, finale, with the percussionists having a field day. The quiet epilogue soothed the excited audience, which had been introduced to "Americana" at the beginning of the evening with the terse "The Unanswered Question," by Charles Ives. A very fine ending to an exciting and varied Proms week.

Opening shock

DANCE
Dora Sowden

CONSIDERING how much was left to the imagination in the presentation of "Coppelia" (Act II), Simon Semenoff and the dancers he had gathered around him at the Bat-Dor Theatre (June 25) did remarkably well.

He was fortunate that two fine dancers from the Royal Swedish Ballet were participating, and also that some local dancers filled the scene.

Yet the bare stage when the curtain opened and he wheeled in his Coppelia "doll" was a shock from which the act didn't quite recover. Some "props" — a table, a chair, a bottle, two glasses, books — were soon added. And "dolls" — Irit Berkovitz, Dafna Nahumovsky, Heidi Kirsch, Sigal Ronen — did their share, too.

One incongruity remained: the difference in style between the guest dancers and their host. Simon Semenoff is very obviously a professional who knows his way around the stage, but the wide generation gap that inevitably develops even in classical ballet was evident.

He was too amiable-looking for sinister old Dr. Coppelius, and his attempts to cut out Franz's heart for his doll didn't look at all like Dr. Christian Barnard performing today's kind of wizardry. His consultation of his magic books was also too cursory — but he was quite astonishing in the way (born 1908) he lifted Swanilda three times.

Denise Welten, who was here last year with other members of the Swedish Ballet, had more opportunity this time to show the clean lines of her technical skill — and 30 fouettés (plus another 30 turns) — to bring the house down. Yet, however pretty she was as Swanilda and clever in her "Spanish" and "Scottish" variations, she was a sweet little girl being naughty; not enough of a minx.

In the excerpt from "Swan Lake," she would have done better as Odette than Odile. Eyes are not enough to indicate malicious intent. Nor was there sufficient edge to her dancing, though strong and beautiful, to make her an evil fairy.

Pasi Nieminen was a handsome Franz in "Coppelia," good in mime, manly in solo, firm in support of the ballerina. Though he looked a little lost at the opening of the "Swan Lake" excerpt, he made up for it with some displays of technical feats.

About the duet from "Flower Festival at Genzano," I am at a disadvantage after having seen the ballet done in the Bournonville festival in Copenhagen last November. Comparisons are odious, I know, and Denise Welten and Pasi Nieminen were romantic and refined. But that ultimate Bournonville lyricism which makes all movements flow without visible preparation or effort in constant visual song was lacking. This can hardly be held against them. It is apparently a Danish preserve.

One piano doesn't make an orchestra— which "Coppelia" surely requires, but it is a credit to the valiant player, Naomi Lev, and the dancers, that the accompaniment became acceptable. For the rest, the music was taped.

Music club for TA

ENTERTAINMENT BRIEFS / Michal Yudelman

A NEW summer club, combining good rock and classical music with food and beverages, is to be opened in Tel Aviv's Ganei Hata'arucha by producer Michael Tupuah and Yigal Krauz.

Shalom Hanoch, David Broza, the Hamsin rock group and the 16th Sheep are already scheduled to appear at the new club, called Emtza Haderech (Middle of the Road).

Seating 800, Emtza Haderech will have seating for the audience around tables, and they will be served by waiters on roller skates.

The club's operators promise to dedicate one evening a week to classical music, including orchestras, choirs and Cameri compositions. Live performances will be held four nights a week, while admission on other nights will be free of charge.

FRENCH singer-composer Georges Moustaki will arrive in Israel next month for three concerts, accompanied by a Brazilian band and a singer. Egyptian-born Moustaki emigrated in his youth to France and first won recognition when he wrote and composed "Milord" for Edith Piaf. Moustaki will appear in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem and Haifa.

JAZZ LOVERS take note: Dizzy Gillespie, one of the fathers of modern jazz, is scheduled to arrive next month with three musicians for three concerts in Israel.

THE LEISURELY tradition of "tea and symphony" will be renewed this Sunday at the Tel Aviv Hilton's newly opened Terrace. The Netanya Orchestra, conducted by Samuel Lewis, will play light classical music (a la Boston Pops), while guests will be able to enjoy French pastries and tea and coffee — all for an entrance fee of IS85.

"AN EVENING of Jazz Music and Dance in Concert" will by presented at Beit Ha'am on June 30 by Joan Klein, a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music who has performed on Broadway and in various modern dance companies.

Appearing with Klein's company will be the Borris Gammer Quartet, a jazz group formed by Gammer, a new immigrant from Riga. — L.K.

LEARN WHILE YOU LISTEN!

Now for the first time, you can learn Hebrew as it's spoken in Israel, in the quiet of your home.

"Shalom from Jerusalem" on monthly cassettes (with companion booklets), offers a variety of subjects on each tape — interviews with prominent Israelis, an excerpt from a play, a debate in the Knesset, advertisements, recipes, brief announcements, lessons (Bible, Literature, Language), learning a song, etc., etc. Every festival and holiday is featured with suitable texts (reading, songs, stories). VARIETY IS THE WORD. BOTH INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE.

Produced by the World Zionist Organisation (Dept. for Culture in the Diaspora — Hebrew Language Division) in cooperation with the Israel Broadcasting Authority and Rolnik Publishers — another publication of Rolnik Publishers - something different

Something Different and presented by The Jerusalem Post. "Shalom from Jerusalem" brings everyday Hebrew into your home, to be played again and again until you become conversant.

The 60 minute monthly cassettes are accompanied by a booklet containing the complete text. The most difficult words of each programme are listed together with their English, French, Spanish and Russian translations.

"Shalom from Jerusalem" — 12 monthly programmes — IL4200 (incl. VAT) packing and post free.

Winding up 31st drive

By HELEN ROSSI

WE ARE at last closing the books on the 31st drive of The Jerusalem Post Toy Fund. It was a bumper year, with the total income now standing at IL1,099,816.60, including the IL66,890, which came in since February (see list below). Our gifts were out on time, and the additional money received was used to answer special pleas from social workers.

Hanukka is very early this year — the first candle will be lit on December 2. Contributions coming in from now on will be credited to our 32nd drive, which starts on October 31.

Already organizing for our 32nd drive are children in Quiny, Mass., who wrote in some months ago asking for details of the Toy Fund as they wished to organize in advance all of their gift-giving projects.

And our faithful friend Sophie Tobias, of Philadelphia, who has been running her own mini-drive for the last few years, has decided to take on our Toy Fund Tops (still a small quantity left) for a special effort this time. We are sure our other mini-drivers — Mrs. Rose Lieberman, of Kibbutz Gesher Haziv, and Mrs. Frieda Epstein, of Chicago, are well ahead with their plans. And we also have some new friends — our Finnish Connection — from whom we are awaiting news.

There are two late specials that went into our 31st drive. We had a letter from J.L., of Costa Rica, before Pessah, asking us to give his cheque for $100 to a needy family. Since The Post tends toward helping children, we answered the plea of our liaison officer Elisheva Shelev, chief inspector of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, to help make a real Barmitzvah party for a 13-year-old who had spent all his life with foster parents.

Happiness knew no bounds as this youngster (dressed in new shirt, slacks and shoes — the first he had in a very long time) played host to his classmates and friends at a joyous affair held at the Western Wall. His foster mother worked hard producing all sorts of unusual delicacies to make this an outstanding event.

As we do not have an address for the donor, our sincerest thanks are hereby extended to J.L. We could not have found a bigger "mitzva" (good deed) for him.

Another of our anonymous donors — this one from Shavei Zion — this year sent us a cheque for $1,000. With the guidance of our liaison officer, we used this gift for a special project. The project is the Sanhedria Home (Religious) in Jerusalem where 85 boys from difficult environments are sent by social workers from all over the country.

To our surprise, what they wanted was an electric organ, which, we were told, might bring the children to a greater appreciation of music.

OUR SPECIAL FUND, for which we sold our now famous Toy Fund Tops, has completed its first lap. Eight thousand tops have been sold to date — 2,000 are still left and we expect these will be sold out shortly.

After paying all our bills, 10 young teenagers have had their unusual requests granted this year — and IL140,000 has been invested so that this Special Fund will be ongoing.

We are not quite sure who was happier — the social workers or the recipients. So frustrated by their inability to give some help to their charges, these social workers felt that these gifts had come from heaven. Their letters of appreciation, together with those from the youngsters involved, are most moving.

Martin Planter, of New York, sent us a letter saying that "The Post should use the same idea, as used for toys, to start the Israel Defence Fund." Since we have no address for Mr. Planter, we are taking this opportunity of telling him, and those other kind donors who may be interested, that such a fund has been running for years. Contributions will be gladly received, and should be sent to: Israel Defence Fund, Ministry of Defence, Hakirya, Tel Aviv.

Donors on our last list for our 31st drive include:—

$125 Jewish Congregation Sisterhood, Fort Belvoir, Arlington, Va.
Aust.$30 For Danny and Jordana W. from their parents, London.
IL1,500 Anonymous, Jerusalem.
$25 In memory of my mother, Hannah Zieper in token of her love to her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, all little children in Israel and the world — from Florence Stenger (Zieper), Worcester, Mass.
$20 In memory of my dear father Herbert Weisberg, whose 'yartzeit' was the fifteenth day of Shevat — Mrs. Muriel W. Spector, Syracuse, N.Y.
$18 Sonia E. Mogen, Chevy Chase, Md. Helen, Lionel, Jonathan and Paul Koven, Oakville, Ontario, Canada, in honour of their Kfar Blum Family, the Levanons.
IL540 + 50 For our grandsons Yair and Yaron and all the children in Israel, Shalom! — from Elisabeth Bonn, Hilversum, Holland.
$10 Zealey Gerber, Leoria, N.J. Mrs. Rose Kringle, El Paso, Texas.
$5 Rabbi and Mrs. Stephen C. Lerner, New York. Mrs. Lorraine Sunshine, Bayside, N.Y. Jack and Julie Keller, St. Joseph, Michigan. In memory of Esther Vilnay, she will be a great loss to her family and Israel and all of us who had the pleasure of knowing her — from Mr. & Mrs. Ross N. Lemen, Waukegan, Ill.

Trees of the forest

TORA AND FLORA
Louis I. Rabinowitz

IT WAS a completely unexpected sight. At the lowest point of the valley, on what had been the "unbeaten track" until the soil was completely washed away by the rains, I saw an apple tree laden with fruit. True, it was an uncultivated crab-apple and the fruit, not much bigger than a large plum, was tart. But it was very refreshing and I helped myself to as many as I could cram into my haversack.

That unexpected sight gave renewed meaning to the biblical verse in which the apple is mentioned. It is Canticles 2.3 and reads: "As an apple tree among the trees of the forest, so is my beloved among the sons. Under its shadow I delighted to sit."

But the delight is not confined to the welcome shade. It continues: "And it was sweet to my taste." Its refreshing quality is referred to two verses later with "refresh me with apples."

As I recently pointed out, the phrase "trees of the forest" in the Bible is applied specifically to non-fruit-bearing trees as opposed to fruit-bearing trees, which are called "trees of the field."

The apple tree referred to in Canticles, like mine, was in the forest and not in an orchard. And Rashi, with his remarkable knowledge of flora, explicitly refers to that fact in his commentary. "When an apple tree is found among non-fruit-bearing trees it is especially welcome since its fruit gives delight both to the senses of smell and taste."

As a matter of fact, the Targum, the Aramaic translation of the Bible, also confirms that the tree of the forest in this verse applies to non-fruit-bearing trees. But, strangely enough, he identifies the tapuah with the etrog, not with the apple.

Fight for freedom

By CARL ALPERT
Special to The Jerusalem Post

THIS MONTH marks the fifth anniversary of Abe Stolar's captivity.

Five years ago, on June 19, 1975, Abe, a native-born American from Chicago, together with his wife and son, were preparing to leave Moscow airport when they were turned back by the Soviet authorities. They have been held ever since.

Family and friends in the U.S. and in Israel have been seeking to obtain his release, but to no avail. The Russians no longer bother even to give explanations.

The Stolar case has been discussed in Congress. Queries have been addressed to the American embassy in Moscow. Appeals have been sent to the Soviet government. But through it all, the White House has been strangely silent.

THE SAD STORY of Abe Stolar had a tragic beginning. Stolar and his sister were teenagers when their parents left Chicago in 1931 and, as Communists, travelled to Russia. Revelation came fast. Their American passports were taken away. The father was arrested and disappeared in 1937. The mother died in 1949.

Abe Stolar never gave up hope of leaving the Soviet Union, but his case became entangled in red tape. The Russians claimed him, and the Americans were indifferent to his passport and U.S. origins. When the Soviet authorities began to allow emigration of Jews, Stolar's hopes rose. Relatives in Jerusalem sent him a formal invitation, and in 1975 he and his family were given their exit visas. They prepared to leave.

Then, at the airport, flight tickets in hand, they were told that Abe's wife had years ago had access to "national secrets," and the family could not leave.

The story was false, but there was nothing they could do. They had nothing but their hand luggage and the clothes on their backs.

For five years, they have literally lived out of those suitcases, yet recent visitors who have seen them in their humble Moscow flat report that Abe Stolar somehow manages to retain his optimism and even his sense of humour. He misses peanut butter, he says.

National and international committees have been set up to agitate, often successfully, for the release of refuseniks. But Abe is not the usual refusenik. He is not a Russian. He had never been an activist or a dissident.

On the fifth anniversary of his captivity, friends and family in Chicago, Jerusalem and Haifa have vowed to accelerate the fight for his freedom.

Meanwhile, in a warehouse in Haifa, the Stolars' crates and suitcases, containing all their possessions, wait to be claimed.

Ecology campaign

By MARY HIRSCHFELD
Jerusalem Post Reporter

THE COUNCIL for a Beautiful Israel — Haifa's staunchest defender of the ecology — has again taken to the barricades. The issue now is Gan Ha'em, the largest municipal park in Haifa, which is about to lose one-quarter of its area to a new shopping and arts centre. And according to council experts, this amounts to condemning the park to extinction.

The new centre, approved last month by the local town planning committee, is to be a 600-square-metre maze of art galleries, cafes and shops, to be situated at the Gan's southern corner, where today there is a children's playground and an open-air stage.

All buildings will be several metres below street level, with their roofs facing Sderot Hanassi. An adjoining, 150-metre-long promenade will lead strollers to nearby Central Carmel.

The Council for a Beautiful Israel is opposing the project for a variety of resasons. First, its experts claim, the centre is to be built at a busy intersection that is already unable to cope with the traffic demands.

"City Hall has long been talking of enlarging Sderot Hanassi and easing the traffic on Central Carmel, but nothing has been done so far," said a council member. "If that centre gets off the ground, it will turn the whole area into one, unmanageable traffic jam."

The second objection is that the Gan's delicate ecological balance will be irreparably damaged by the "intruders," and that the much-reduced park won't survive for long: "The Gan Ha'em is one of the few leisure areas left in the city and should be preserved at all costs. It is a favourite place for children, who have a large playground area and luxurious lawns to play on. And it is a source of pleasure to others — families and passers-by."

According to the council, the original Gan Ha'em covered some 40 dunams. Much of it was taken by the City Zoo and Biological Institute. Today, it occupies a 10-dunam area, "but somebody at City Hall wants to reduce the park to a backyard garden," an angry ecologist said. A Technion survey of parks around the world established that nowhere are municipal parks smaller than 20 dunams.

The city engineer's office denied that the development would constitute an environmental hazard: "The greenery will be respected and most of the trees will be left untouched," said an official. "Actually, it will make the Gan Ha'em more attractive than ever."

Sceptical view

By BENNY MORRIS
Jerusalem Post Reporter

"I'M TOO SCEPTICAL to be an agnostic or an atheist," says Richard Popkin, professor of philosophy at Washington University, in St. Louis. The remark, coming in mid-interview, was almost predictable.

An expert on scepticism ("The History of Scepticism from Erasmus to Spinoza"), Popkin has just completed a semester as guest lecturer at Tel Aviv University. And he practises what he preaches, perhaps to the limit.

In 1966, Popkin published "The Second Oswald," a challenge to the official version of the Kennedy assassination. He argued that at least two assassins — one shooting from behind and one from the famous grassy knoll in front — were responsible for the murder. He continues to believe that the official findings were "incorrect" and cites, in support, the conclusions of a recent U.S. congressional investigation.

Given this cast of mind, it is not unnatural that Popkin also pooh-poohs the official U.S. explanation of the Iran hostages raid debacle, perceiving darker motives for the failure than the official explanation.

At another point, Popkin hinted that Israel's present government must surely have some hidden, machiavellian motives for its abrasive and illogical moves — "Otherwise, how can one explain them?" he asks, turning palm upwards a pair of pudgy hands.

ACCORDING TO Popkin, he analyses and teaches sceptical thought "with an eye to currect affairs and in the hope of getting people to see things in a critical light."

And a critical light, certainly, is what Popkin focuses on Judaism. He is sceptical, not to say dismissive, of traditional beliefs and practices: "They are largely meaningless for most contemporary Jews. They are outmoded, especially in all that concerns and stems from supernatural claims."

Popkin explains: "God is the source of the content of traditional Judaism. But few people today are able to believe in His existence, as traditionally conceived." Adds Popkin: "We simply don't know. Our attempt to understand God's meaning keeps changing."

He quickly elaborates by referring to the modern believer's attempt to come to grips with the significance and horror of the Holocaust, and with the establishment of Israel.

"The Holocaust cast doubt upon God's goodness, if not existence," says Popkin simply.

Some Jewish theologians, he adds, regard the establishment of the Jewish state as part of a divine scheme — "a form of compensation, as it were, for the Holocaust." Others, he says, see it as merely a political, "secular development."

Popkin himself finds both interpretations "hard to believe." Whatever Israel's achievements, he says, "it cannot compensate for the destruction of European Jewry." On the other hand, its rise and continued existence is not easily intelligible as "part of the normal scheme of history."

He also finds the "unanimity of the world's condemnation of Israel's every action" both "fishy" and indicative of something, though he won't commit himself further. He agrees that the Begin government's policies have helped such a situation come about, but he hints that an "unnatural" hand has played a part in this. To what end he cannot say. Popkin's metaphysics of scepticism and conspiracy once again coalesce.

BORN AND brought up in New York City in "a not particularly Jewish Jewish family," Popkin arrived at Judaism's doorstep incidentally, through his study of philosophy.

In the late 1950s, Popkin began studying the writings of various minor 17th and 18th century philosophers of Marrano origin.

By way of implying topicality, Popkin compares the Marranos to present-day Russian Jewry, who must practise their faith in private if not in strict secrecy.

Continuing his studies from the 1960s, Popkin is currently engaged in an analysis of a number of Marrano philosophers who lived in Holland during the 17th and 18th centuries. By coincidence, a large collection of their manuscripts was recently deposited in the National Library at Givat Ram.

Popkin, who found the manuscripts in Amsterdam's Etz Haim Seminary next to the Portuguese Synagogue, said that during World War II, the Nazis had sacked the seminary. Only about half of the original collection was retrieved after the war and replaced in the synagogue, which was declared by the Dutch government to be a national monument.

"I worked on the papers in the very room where Spinoza was excommunicated by the Amsterdam rabbis in 1656 for doubting the primacy of Mosaic law over natural law," he says proudly.

ONE OF THE rabbis, the Venetian-born Saul Levi Morteira, had been Spinoza's mentor before participating in the beit din which excommunicated the noted philosopher. Morteira, a wordly and cultured man, had served as secretary to the French king's doctor before becoming a hacham of Amsterdam's Beit Ya'acov community.

Morteira wrote a wide range of philosophical tracts, including "Givat Shaul," "The Eternal Nature of the Law of Moses," "Questions of a Priest from Rouen and My Answers to Them," and "Criticisms and Arguments Against the Christian Religion."

Among the tracts studied by Popkin are also those of Orobio de Castro, a member of another famous Marrano physician's family, who was professor of medicine and theology in Spain. He later moved to Amsterdam and wrote responsa to Spinoza and Locke, and anti-Christian polemics.

Another of Popkin's objects of study is Isaac de Pinto, one of 18th century Europe's wealthiest men. De Pinto, says Popkin, in 1760 lent the British government a sum equal to 20 per cent of its national debt. He was for many years the director of the Dutch East India Company and a prominent member of the Amsterdam Jewish community as well as secretary of the Dutch academy.

The latter position was his by virtue of his philosophical and economic writings, which were prodigious.

De Pinto has been described as "the first theoretician of capitalism," and his works were discussed in print by Adam Smith and Karl Marx, who called the financier "the Pindar of the Amsterdam stock exchange." De Pinto, who died in 1787, was an opponent of populist democracy and upheld the rights of colonial powers. He decried the American Revolution.

Popkin doesn't hide his identification with his Marrano subjects. "They were Jews thrust into the world without solid Jewish backgrounds or beliefs, who tried to understand their surroundings with worldly, modern tools rather than the Halacha," he says.

Popkin believes that "understanding the human condition could lead to its amelioration." Knowledge, he says, can help to "defend us against the nuclear junk."

HARRY HURWITZ

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — I have listened to Harry Hurwitz effectively persuade the U.S. Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations. I have spoken to a correspondent who interviewed him for a TV news programme in Houston, Texas, and lauded his ability to handle the media. I have heard glowing reports from a Christian preacher who was in the audience for a Hurwitz address to a fundamentalist convention in America's southwest.

I have seen him explain, amplify and reason with a variety of American reporters, civic leaders and Jewish professionals. They may not have always agreed with him, but they invariably left the room with more food for thought than when they entered. Instead of disparaging his selection for a key U.S. information role in personal terms (June 2), The Post would do well to urge more appointments of similar high calibre.

DIRE AUGURY

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Gush Emunim is playing a dangerous game. Testing the limits of its power with a not unsympathetic government and against an entirely hostile Palestinian population, it is able to justify every action by the intensity of belief, and insulate itself from the horrible consequences of its policy.

Like other messianic groups, Gush Emunim is trying to revitalize ancestral values and political Zionism in a society once again searching for its soul. Innocently or not, however, it has become involved in what Jean-Paul Sartre would have called an "atrocity-producing situation." Each bold or illegal move on its part calls for counter-moves on the part of the West Bank inhabitants and ultimately the army. Each side sees itself as the innocent victim of the other: each episode ups the ante of intolerance and violence.

RESPECT FOR JUDAISM AND ISRAEL

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Your article of May 23 spoke of the late Dr. G. Douglas Young's establishment of the American Institute of Holy Land Studies and says that very often, the "ignorance and contempt" on the part of the students there for Jews, Judaism and Israel, was changed into "understanding and appreciation."

The assumption that most Christians, and especially most evangelical Christians, are contemptuous and ignorant of Judaism and Jews concerns me. Many, if not most evangelical Christians have deep respect for Judaism as the fountain of Christianity and for Israel as the fulfilment of biblical prophecy. Therefore, please cease assuming that we are all contemptuous of you. We're not.

NO TO SHARON AS DEFENCE MINISTER

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — I wholeheartedly agree with the two first paragraphs of Ms. Laurence's letter of June 3, but object to her description of Ariel Sharon as "the most brilliant strategist and military mind in the world today." Sharon as Minister of Defence would be a disaster for this country.

No wars and no terror could ever persuade me or my friends to leave this country. The appointment of Sharon as Minister of Defence would.

GESHER

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — As someone who was fortunate enough to participate in a three-day weekend at the Gesher House in Safad, I would like to commend Judy Siegel for her excellent and revealing article, "Encounters with the other kind" (May 20). But even more, I would like to thank and commend Rabbi Benjamin Levene who directed the weekend's programme. Via games, dramatizations, discussions, guest lecturers and a "special" Shabbat, his message of unifying both the religious and the secular was a success.

NO ZIONIST

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — In Postscripts of May 27, you mention that Epstein, of the pre-war Czech national waterpolo team, left in 1939 for the U.S. He did not — he was separated from his parents and family in the Terezin Ghetto and only arrived in the U.S. in 1948.

There is absolutely no truth in the statement — "sent his daughter to the Hebrew University." Both Epstein and his wife were most unhappy with their daughter's decision to go to Israel. In her book, Helen Epstein quotes her mother's reaction to her wish to go to Israel in the following words: "Your grandfather would turn over in his grave if he had one. To think that his granddaughter, the granddaughter of a baptized Jew, would become a Zionist! He wouldn't understand it."

PROGRESS IN HATIKVA QUARTER

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Philip Gillon's review of the TV programme on the Hatikva Quarter (June 13) needs a reply mainly because my opening words coincided with the end of the programme and were overwhelmed by the titles and closing music. The main points are:

First, well before there were studies, we authorized more funds for Hatikva than for almost any other neighbourhood. In late July of 1979 the local steering committee requested and received approval (in early August) for projects whose cost, in present funds, is more than IL95 million. Later, additional funds of about IL40 million were provided — all this long before the Dagani studies were completed.

These first projects are mainly formal and informal education for pre-school, school, and adult age groups. Included are such imaginative and promising ventures as a street theatre, a branch of Tzavta (including a book store), and moving the Association of Artists and Sculptors from North Tel Aviv to Hatikva. The former Ohel school is being expanded to provide studios, exhibition halls, printing and etching facilities, and classes — all to be used by Hatikva residents. Artists and students from outside the neighbourhood have expressed readiness to move to Hatikva. Two elementary schools will also be combined, for use both as schools and as a community centre. The teaching of math. with the aid of computers has already shown important gains.

These ideas, proposed by the Hatikva steering committee, were what the project calls a pre-programme. Now that the surveys and studies are in, we expect, in a few weeks to receive a comprehensive long-range programme for social, economic, education and health advances.

The second point is that the programme did not bring out the major physical needs of Hatikva, and gave some viewers the impression of an ordinary Tel Aviv neighbourhood, which unfortunately somehow had poor schools, low educational attainments, and poor law and order. In fact, Hatikva housing is in critical shape, and has been for decades. Four to five times the proportion of Hatikva families live in crowded or unsafe dwellings than in the country as a whole.

This means that the social advance of Hatikva can only succeed if there is also massive physical rehabilitation. One estimate assesses the long-range needs at 1,000 new apartments and the renovation of a similar number. The work will take many years, if only because of budget constraints.

Any substantial change in the feeling and actuality of law and order in Hatikva cannot take place in isolation from the condition of crime and drugs in the country as a whole and in the Tel Aviv area in particular.

Despite the dire condition of housing, Hatikva residents give priority to education. In the present Book Week, the new Hatikva book store had larger sales than the main fair in North Tel Aviv. This shows the great potential for Hatikva renewal.

Coordinator, Project Renewal
Office of the Deputy Prime Minister

SUPPORT FOR BEGIN

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — The possibility you suggest in your June 11 editorial, that it is you who are at fault in misreading the news, is probably true. The fault clearly stems from the fact that you believe what you read in The Jerusalem Post.

Your unbridled hatred of Mr. Begin and his government, your invective, your distortions — all join to give a totally false picture of the situation. I am sure that I am representative of many of your readers who live here and believe in our government. Perhaps, more than anything else, being forced to read what you disgorge raises our fears of what "Labour" has in store for us and we shall do everything possible to assure that Mr. Begin returns after the next election.

BROADCAST TO AMERICA

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — Mr. Jules Schwartz, of Poughkeepsie is concerned that there is a paucity of Israeli public relations activity directed to the United States (May 25).

I am pleased to inform him that, as of this year, Israel Radio has been beaming powerful English-language broadcasts each night not only to the U.S., but also to Canada. These broadcasts have earned two Review of International Broadcasting awards for excellence in news coverage, and in all, they make for most enjoyable listening.

Unfortunately, not many Americans are as yet aware of these new broadcasts — something Mr. Schwartz and his public relations colleagues may be able to help rectify.

South African time bomb

By COLIN LEGUM / London

THE AMERICAN COMMISSION on South Africa has been visiting England this month as part of a fact-finding study to evaluate current West European thinking on the future of the apartheid republic.

The commission, a non-governmental body, is an influential group drawn from all walks of life. Its chairman is the new director of the Ford Foundation, Franklin Thomas.

As might be expected, one of the questions the commission members have been putting to Conservative, Labour and Liberal politicians and other specialists in Britain is how much time South Africa still has to put its house in order before it gets to the point of no return reached by the former shah, or the point where white power begins to disintegrate, as in the former Portuguese colonies and Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe).

Predicting the end of the apartheid system in South Africa is nothing new. However, there is now a heightened concern in Western policy-making circles and among investors and industrialists because of the evidence of growing urban violence and resistance in South Africa, highlighted by the spectacular (if not altogether successful) attack made by guerrillas of the African National Congress against the Sasol and Natref coal-to-oil refineries.

Such speculation was also triggered by a statement made in a recent BBC television interview with Bishop Desmond Tutu, of Johannesburg, who spoke confidently of the present political system not surviving more than 10 years.

IN ALL THIS speculation, there are two general tendencies. Some think the apartheid regime can last for 20 years or longer; others that disaster is just around the corner.

Those who take the long-term view (and they certainly do not include all the top leaders of the South African government) lay stress on four main elements: the republic's military and economic power; the fact that the four million or so white South Africans have nowhere else to go, and will therefore "fight to the finish"; the divisions among the 16 million blacks; and the economic and military vulnerability of surrounding African countries.

But, as South Africa's senior military leaders never stop reminding their fellow citizens, a strong army is no ultimate defence against massive popular discontent. The army chief, General Magnus Malan, is among those who hold the view that military strength is only one-fifth of the battle, and that the other four-fifths is winning "the hearts and minds" of the black majority with substantial economic and other changes.

In support of this argument one can point to the experience of the former shah. He, too, presided over what many believed was a strong government and he, most certainly, had an army as powerful (at least on paper) as South Africa's. But all his planes, tanks and guns proved of no practical value once the mobs took to the streets in millions.

While it is true that most white South Africans have nowhere else to go to, and might therefore fight fiercely to the end, it can also be agrued that, because they have no retreat, they will have to compromise.

Those who forecast an early demise of apartheid also tend to make errors. They point to the success of the armed struggle in Mozambique, Angola and Zimbabwe as evidence of this method of struggle proving equally successful in South Africa.

IN FACT, few of the elements in the collapse of Portuguese colonialism, or of the Smith regime in Rhodesia, are present in South Africa.

For instance, the success of all the liberation movements in those countries depended on the willingness of neighbouring African states to offer guerrilla bases, and on the inability of the Portuguese and the Rhodesians to break the capacity of those front-line states to continue to give such support — although they came fairly close to breaking the resistance of Zambia and Mozambique.

Zimbabwe's new prime minister has already said that he will not allow his fragile young republic to be used as a base for guerrillas to cross into South Africa; nor is Mozambique likely to do so.

The other border states — Botswana, Lesotho and Swaziland — are even more vulnerable than Mozambique or Zimbabwe. That kind of guerrilla action therefore appears to be ruled out.

What cannot be eliminated is the possibility of arms and trained guerrillas being infiltrated across South Africa's borders — as has been happening with growing frequency in the last year or so — to start a campaign of urban violence.

It is extremely difficult to see how Pretoria can effectively curb this threat. The more urban violence there is, the holder the black opposition will become.

So the scene seems to be set for growing violence in the republic, both from the official side and from the opposition — unless, of course, the minority white regime is able to carry out fundamental political reforms.

The chances of that do not seem high, at least not before violence has reached such a pitch that white South Africans begin to feel power slipping from their hands.

No one can say how long that might take, but it is possible violence will mount steadily over the next three to five years.

At some point after that, perhaps not for many years, the chances of a negotiated settlement will be lost forever.

Soviet oil nightmare

By MARK FRANKLAND
London

OF ALL the nightmares that trouble the statesman of the West none, apart from the prospect of a nuclear war, is more terrible than the following.

The Soviet Union, today an exporter of oil, suffers a rapid decline in oil production. Within a few years — by 1985 perhaps — they need to import some 200m. tons of oil a year for themselves and their allies in Eastern Europe.

Unable to buy such a large amount of oil on an increasingly tight market, Moscow begins a campaign of political pressure and subversion against the Middle East states, which are already shaken by the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Governments fall. New regimes, relying on Soviet advisers and weapons, come to power. The oil needed for the survival of the West starts to flow east.

One can be quite precise about when this nightmare began. It was in April 1977, when the Central Intelligence Agency published a study called "Prospects for Soviet Oil Production." The CIA, presumed to be using information that was unavailable to Western oil companies, predicted that Soviet oil production would fall by 1985 to between 400 and 500m. tons a year (last year Soviet production was 586m. tons and this year it is planned at 606m.)

THE CIA report was quickly challenged as too alarmist, and last April its director, Admiral Stansfield Turner, gave the impression that his analysts now think that 500m. tons rather than 400m. is the more likely figure for 1985.

But many European experts think that even this prediction is too low. The British believe that the Russians could still be producing 600m. tons, or not far below it, in 1985. The French, who have a good record in this field, offer the figure of 700m.

There is a similarly wide disagreement over the size of Soviet oil reserves. The Russians no longer publish any figures of their own although they do, no one knows why, for natural gas. The CIA puts the oil reserves at 40b. barrels. British Petroleum estimates the reserves to be 70b. while a new report by a Swedish firm called Petro Studies estimates them to be 150m. barrels.

Even excluding the Swedish figure, which the oil industry regards with acute suspicion, the difference between the CIA estimate and others is very big.

Behind this argument over figures, however, is a general agreement that Soviet oil production will come to a peak in the 1980s and then — how quickly is in dispute — start to decline, unless large new oil fields are discovered and brought into production. The merit of the CIA report was that it identified this trend and explained why it was happening.

THE MOST significant fact about Soviet oil production in the 1970s was that all its increase came from the oil fields of Western Siberia. The older fields around Baku and in the Volga-Urals region were producing less and less, but this was more than made up for by the oil of Tyumen, a little populated area of swamp, tundra and forest and possessed of a foul climate.

The pride of Tyumen oil is the giant field called Samotlor, the fourth largest in the world and now producing 130m. tons a year, almost a quarter of the total Soviet production.

A great deal depends on whether Samotlor has reached its peak and, if so, how long it will be able to maintain it. It was here that the CIA sounded the alarm.

It said Soviet technicians, trying to extract too much oil too quickly, had abused the water-drive extraction methods they are wedded to and were not only getting more water than oil from the ground but might have lost control over oil extraction.

Europeans doubt that the latter disaster happened, but it seems indisputable that there were difficulties.

Between 1977 and 1979, rigs were pulled back from exploration in other parts of Tyumen to help repair the damage by drilling wells at closer intervals. Soviet scientists have given public warnings that if reckless extraction to achieve rapid production goes on, "the country's oil production will peak in a comparatively short time and begin to fall."

BUT IF Western experts disagree on when Samotlor will start to go into decline, they agree that exploration (which the Russians themselves are now criticizing for being insufficiently active) has come up with nothing in West Siberia to replace it. There is oil elsewhere but the biggest fields, probably of Alaskan proportions, are off the north coast, where drilling in Arctic seas full of drifting pack ice will present technical problems that no one in the world has yet tackled.

The Russians, after years of being as careless about energy as the Americans, now realize that they, too, have an energy problem. When President Leonid Brezhnev met President Jimmy Carter in Vienna last year, Brezhnev even called it the Soviet Union's most pressing one.

But it has to be put in perspective. "I would rather," said one Western energy specialist, "be energy minister in Russia than in any Western country." And he offered a few figures to explain why.

Soviet oil production may have peaked, or be about to, but Russia is still the world's largest producer (Saudi Arabia last year extracted 463m. tons, the U.S. 430m.). It has one-third of the world's proven natural gas reserves, and the world's largest coal reserves. It has considerable unused hydro-power potential and it has embarked on a massive nuclear power programme (30 stations under construction or planned).

WHERE, THEN, are its problems? First, turning these reserves into energy is becoming monstrously expensive. "Eighty per cent of our industrial capacity is in the west," a Soviet official complained to me in Moscow recently, "while 80 per cent of our energy sources are in the east."

Soviet industry and the Soviet consumer — the latter paying only nominal prices for gas and electricity — are being urged to consume less but with results that are hard to predict.

Second, oil exports now account for half of Soviet hard currency earnings. It seems almost certain that these will taper off, although the Russians will probably balance this by increasing their natural gas exports.

Third, the Soviet Union will not be able to increase its oil exports to East Europe more than fractionally. East Europe, now getting 80 per cent of its oil from Moscow, will have to buy the additional oil it needs from OPEC.

The Russians will be able to increase gas and electricity deliveries to their allies, but there is little scope for substituting these for oil because East Europe already uses almost the minimum essential amount of oil in its energy mix.

THIS IS bad news for East Europe, for it will be caught between the need to spend hard currency on oil and the need to buy Western technology and pay off mounting debts to the West. It is difficult to see how it can avoid slow economic growth and possibly, as a result, public discontent.

The end of Soviet oil exports to the West, and East Europe's rising demand for OPEC oil could mean an additional strain on the world market of 100m. tons by 1985.

It is here that Soviet diplomatic activity and political pressure to ensure its allies do get oil may be expected. The risks of this, in a turbulent Middle East, are clear enough, although it does not necessarily herald a Russian advance on the Gulf, particularly given U.S. warnings.

But it is not likely — or so European experts feel — that the Soviet Union will need to go to the Middle East wells itself. Its vast reserves, given conservation and sensible management, will protect it.

It is also Soviet policy, expressed privately to Westerners, to be self-sufficient in energy — an aim entirely in keeping with everything one knows of official Soviet psychology.

Marital triumph

By JEREMY TAYLOR / Port of Spain

HAITI SPENT about $700,000 getting its tubby, 28-year-old president-for-life married last month. It was a pretty wild party, with a 101-gun salute and a champagne buffet for 5,000 at his presidential ranch.

The affair has been reported mainly as a joke, but for President "Baby Doc" Duvalier, himself no liberal, it was a major victory over the Haitian old guard, the "dinosaurs," who have remained the real power in Haiti since his father, "Papa Doc," died in 1971.

Papa Doc's widow, the formidable Maman Simone, had long opposed the idea of her son getting married. Not only would it undermine her own influence and her position as Haiti's "first lady," but it would encourage Baby Doc's sense of independence and his rash promises to liberalize a state which is not only one of the most oppressive in the Western hemisphere but also the most impoverished.

Maman Simone tried the same tactic with her son's new choice earlier this year, but the going has got tougher, and the attempt at an arrest was bungled.

What made the whole affair rankle more is that Haiti's new first lady, Michelle Bennett, is not only a divorcée with two children, but is the former daughter-in-law of Captain Alix Pasquet, who was prominent in an attack on Papa Doc's presidential palace 22 years ago.

THE FEUD stemming from that reaches into every level of Haitian society. Baby Doc had to prepare the way for his marriage with purges in the cabinet, the army and the civil service, during which he brought back to his side his old ally Henri Bayard, who three years ago helped him develop a strategy designed to break down Maman Simone's influence.

Jean-Claude Duvalier. (Camera Press)

For the moment, the advantage lies with the young president: vicious laws introduced last year to silence the dissenting press have been relaxed, as has theatre censorship, and the Christian Democrat leader Sylvio Claude, jailed last August, has been freed, though he might well be safer in jail.

But the president's marital triumph is a small distraction from the mounting tension and embarrassment of his regime. The flow of Haitian refugees into the U.S. has swollen enormously, though the Cuban exodus has distracted attention from it.

Unlike Cuba, Haiti has been trying hard to stop the outflow, but Baby Doc's failure to achieve any real social change, combined with a disastrous drought in the west, have simply added to the queue.

IN THE U.S., Haitians have been having a much tougher time than the Cubans, since they have the misfortune to come not from a Communist dictatorship but from an American-backed one, and are thus worse than useless as propaganda. Many have been sent back to face the wrath of the Tontons Macoutes, Haiti's dreaded presidential militia.

And that embarrassment has coincided with a scathing report from the Inter-American Human Rights Commission, which says that torture, execution and arbitrary arrest are still commonplace in Baby Doc's Haiti, that basic social rights are "almost nonexistent," and that the regime has simply failed in its promise to liberalize.

Wage levels can be gauged by the fact that dockers in the capital, Port-au-Prince, have been on strike for a 700 per cent wage rise — to $20 a week.

THE CARTER administration, fearful of any further "instability" in the Caribbean, has continued to pour aid into Haiti despite doubts about its end use. Development has never been a strong suit of the 23-year-old Duvalier family dictatorship.

One of Baby Doc's more bizarre development schemes has been under discussion with a New York environmental systems company — a plan to ship Washington's sewage sludge to Haiti for processing into fertilizer.

A furious Caribbean diplomat fumed: "Duvalier thinks that is what we mean by the transfer of technology."

El Al vows war on charter rule violators

By MICHAL YUDELMAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — El Al has declared war on charter companies which violate government charter regulations.

Two hotels advertised as part of the Nesher package charter tour to New York are flophouses, never intended to be used by Nesher passengers and named merely as a legal fiction because of the requirement for lodging arrangements on charters, El Al charged yesterday. The nature of the hotels was discovered by an El Al-commissioned survey, according to acting El Al spokesman Arnold Sherman.

He claimed that leading foreign airlines such as Swissair, Lufthansa and British Airways are threatening to reduce the number of scheduled flights to Israel if "unfair" competition by the charter companies continues.

Other alleged violations by charter companies operating in Israel include the sale of one-way tickets from abroad, selling tickets at the airport at reduced prices to last-minute passengers, and allowing more than the legal maximum of 40 Israelis per flight.

El Al officials are investigating the allegations, Sherman said.

British Airways general manager for west and south Europe (including Israel) Ron Green yesterday issued a warning of his own. Green said that if British Airways cuts down its flights to Israel, El Al will be forced to reduce its flights to England.

If Israel continues to allow charter companies to run rampant in its skies, warned Green, it will gradually lose the services of the regular airlines. He pointed to Spain, which he said had lost British Airways flights to certain cities for similar reasons.

Green came to Israel to discuss the present aviation crisis with the Civil Aviation Administration and El Al officials. He proposed tight government control on charter companies to ensure the livelihood of both regular airlines and charters.

Green said that if the government limited charter flights according to estimated traffic flow and demand, there would be enough passengers for both the regular airlines and charter companies. The charter flights could then be increased with expanding tourism, but only according to need. At present the charter companies are grabbing all the traffic, increasing the number of lower-income tourists and thus damaging the development of Israel's tourism infrastructure, he said.

More flights to Cairo from July 15

Jerusalem Post Reporter

El Al and Nefertiti Aviation have agreed to add more Tel Aviv-Cairo flights. Each airline will operate one additional round-trip flight each week from July 15.

The announcement was made yesterday in Cairo's Meridian Hotel at a meeting of 80 leading Egyptian travel agents who convened to discuss ways to promote Egyptian-Israeli tourism.

El Al's extra weekly flight was added due to high demand, an El Al spokesman said. Some 4,480 passengers have flown via El Al from Tel Aviv to Cairo since the line opened, and 4,347 have flown via El Al from Cairo to Tel Aviv, the spokesman said.

Israel-Egypt travel lopsided, says agent

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

CAIRO. — Between 5,000 and 6,000 Israelis have visited Egypt in the four months since normalization began, but only about 60 Egyptians have travelled to Israel, Walter Arbib of VIP Travel told a seminar on Israel-Egypt tourism on Wednesday.

Almost half of the Israelis made their travel arrangements either through VIP of Tel Aviv or Emeco Travel of Cairo, which works in cooperation with VIP, he said.

The seminar, organized and financed by El Al, Nefertiti Airlines, VIP, Emeco and the Shiff hotel chain, was designed to tell Egyptian Travel agents what Israel has to offer tourists.

Budget cuts threaten vocational schools

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Some 300 vocational schools may not reopen after the summer vacation unless dismissed instructors are rehired, the Histadrut warned yesterday.

The planned strike would affect some 120,000 pupils who are due back in their classrooms on September 1, Ze'ev Bistritzkei, the head of the department for secondary school teachers in the Histadrut Teachers Union, told The Jerusalem Post.

The union threatened action because the Education Ministry agreed to cut the budget for vocational training by 20 to 30 per cent in the context of the general budget cuts. More than 100 instructors received dismissal notices or were told they would teach only part time, Bistritzkei said. The notices were sent to instructors in schools run by ORT, Amal and labour-councils, he said.

Katz defends plan for nursing insurance

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Social Affairs Minister Israel Katz yesterday defended his plan to use a portion of National Insurance Institute maternity payments for nursing insurance.

According to Katz, some IS10,000 a month can be saved on the hospitalization of every chronically ill patient now in a hospital bed. More than half the hospital beds in internal medicine departments in the country's hospitals are taken up by such chronically ill patients and costs reach IS15,000 a month per patient, he said.

Katz's plan is to deduct 0.02 per cent from National Insurance Institute maternity payments to be put into a fund that will finance health care for the chronically ill in community facilities or in homes for the elderly — thus getting them out of the hospitals, which in recent years have been overcrowded.

Katz cited statistics showing that while the population of the country has grown sixfold since 1948, the number of people over age 65 has grown tenfold.

The minister, who was speaking at dedication ceremonies of a Joint Distribution Committee-backed home for the elderly in Safad, said that even the well-to-do have difficulty facing the expense of hospitalizing chronically ill members of their family.

The Treasury has tried to prevent passage of the bill Katz proposed more than a month ago, and Katz's defence of the nursing insurance bill yesterday was the most vigorous to date.

The Safad home will have 106 beds, and has been built by Eshel, a Joint-financed programme developing a network of homes for the aged throughout the country. The Safad home is the sixth of its kind, and is to serve Galilee. Joint-financed programmes are cooperative ventures between the U.S.-based social service organization and government ministries.

A seminar on "Israeli Society and Social Policy in the 80s" will be held on Monday at the new Joint-Israel headquarters in Jerusalem. The seminar is sponsored by JDC-Israel and the Brookdale Institute of Gerontology and Adult Human Development in Israel.

NEGEV ROAD

IDF bases. However, they claim there are several alternatives.

The route the society prefers would be a highway built from the bases to connect with the existing Mitzpe Ramon-Eilat road. Besides using already existing highways, the access road has to be built anyway. The route would not destroy archaeological sites and ruin the landscape.

It would take only about 10 minutes more to reach Eilat on this route than on the proposed highway, Siegel says.

Another plan calls for paving a 14-km. stretch from the airbase through Ma'aleh Shahrut to Yotvata on the main road. The route, however, passes through steep wadis and would destroy several known archaeological sites that have not yet been excavated.

The PWD plan totally ignored the local council and went straight to the district council in Beersheba, it is claimed.

"They told us the road is urgent; then they said the road crosses two governmental boundaries — the local council and that of the Eilat municipality, which it doesn't.

"Both excuses are absolute nonsense," the engineer claims.

In addition, Siegel says the department faces an almost impossible task in bridging several wadis. Because of the nature of the ground, engineering difficulties may prove insurmountable. He adds that the department has not yet told him how they will tackle these obstacles, although he has requested such information.

The local council is worried that settlements in the Arava will wither away, if the road is built. "The kibbutzim and moshavim in the area will be neglected like Mitzpe Ramon," says council member Zorkin. "The development budget for the area has already been cut drastically," he adds.

On a recent press tour of the area, Eilat field school instructor Beny Shalmon pointed out the beauty of the region — along with the damage that has already been done. He pointed out that the wadis are alive with many wild animals, including herds of gazelles and several rare birds. There are even hieroglyphics that date from the time of Ramses II, he says.

But these things are not taken into account by the people building the road, Shalmon argues.

"The director of the Public Works Department in Eilat is going to show contractors the area in the near future. So he took a road grader and merrily cut a seven-kilometre swathe in the desert without any permission, just so the contractors can take their pick-up trucks to the site instead of travelling in jeeps," Shalmon says.

The Negev Airbase Constructors, who are building the Ovda base, recently built a large earthen dam to prevent flooding. The company stopped only after it was pointed out by Eilot council archeologist Uri Avner that structures built 5,000 years ago in the area are still standing — proof that floods are not a danger to the region.

The society is frightened by what they term environment.

"Just because we are giving up the Sinai does not give the government an excuse to destroy one of the few wilderness areas we have left in the country," says Yoav Sagi, the organization's secretary-general.

The army spokesman was unwilling to comment on the issue.

$910m. contract for Saudi pipeline

DUESSELDORF (Reuter). — An international consortium headed by a subsidiary of the West German Mannesmann concern has won a $910m. water pipeline contract from Saudi Arabia, Mannesmann said yesterday.

The three-year project, to be started later this year, comprises a 466-kilometre twin pipeline, complete with pumping stations, to carry water to Riyadh from Al Jubail on the Persian Gulf.

Mannesmann Anlagenbau, subsidiary of the Mannesmann trading and engineering concern, had a $340m. share in the contract for Saline Water Conversion Corp. of Saudi Arabia, the company said.

Names of other members of the consortium were not immediately available.

FAKE. — A Givatayim jewelery shop owner, who claimed that armed robbers stole tens of thousands of shekels worth of goods and cash from his store, was ordered held yesterday by the Tel Aviv Magistrates Court on suspicion of having staged the robbery himself.

Profit-taking lowers bond prices

TEL AVIV. — Index-linked bond prices fell by 0.5-1 per cent yesterday in light trading. The trend evidently was an indication of profit-taking.

Trading in stocks was mixed. Commercial bank prices were generally firm, but mortgage bank and financial institution stocks declined.

Industrials and investment companies were mixed, while land development stock prices rose considerably.

Rim IL1 led the market, gaining 10 per cent to stand at 702 points. Total turnover of Rim shares, however, was a fairly low IL105,300. The activity illustrates how a small demand can often cause a sharp increase in shares prices, a situation which can be exploited by speculators.

Elron IL2 also rose nicely, by 8 per cent to stand at 1,147 points, on a turnover of IL2.1m. Lodzia IL1 was buyers only and rose by 5 per cent. Elco IL2.5, which rose by 4.4 per cent, was also among the industrials which rose in price.

Industrials which fell include Fertilizers which lost 4.5 per cent, Teva pref. which lost 2.2 per cent, and Taal which dropped 3.5 per cent to stand at 246 points. Among commercial banks, IDB gained 2.5 per cent to stand at 806 points. Turnover in the shares, at IL40.8m., was second highest of the day. Hapoalim had a turnover of IL62.2m., with no change in price.

Leumi, which had the third largest turnover with IL24.9m. worth of shares traded, gained 0.3 per cent to stand at 724.

A considerable loss was chalked up by General Mortgage on a turnover of IL9.4m. which forced the price down by 3.6 per cent to stand at 590 points.

Carmel led the list of shares with falling prices, with a 5.1 per cent loss to stand at 451 points. Carmel lost 2 per cent to stand at 436 points.

Tefahot was among the few mortgage banks whose shares rose, by an average of about 2 per cent.

Insurance firms generally moved upwards, with Ararat IL1 managing to gain 9.7 per cent to stand at 260 points. Yardenia IL1 also went up nicely, by 4.4 per cent, to 214 points, and Zur went up by 4.5 per cent to 461 points. Total turnover in insurance companies was IL7.8m.

The politics of demagogy

ALTHOUGH he will not, if he can only have his way, advance the date of the election, Mr. Begin is already off and running for another stint as prime minister at the head of the Likud list: this is no longer a surmise but an obvious fact.

What the past few days have also made clear is that Mr. Begin is not running against the leader, whoever he may be, of the Alignment. He is running against the PLO.

Speaking in pastoral Afula this week, Mr. Begin promised to put a bill before the Knesset soon that would force the expulsion of all "PLO supporters" from the country's universities, unless they did so themselves first. He also voiced confidence that all "Zionist parties" would back him on this — meaning that a party that did not would automatically be marked anti-Zionist, if not an outright PLO "fellow traveller."

This was a shrewd political move. Israelis may differ on how to treat the PLO if it changed its spots. But very few among them see the PLO today as anything but a detestable, murderous, marauding gang whose purpose is the destruction of Israel.

The sight of Arab students, citizens of Israel, flaunting PLO colours and shouting (even if only from their T-shirts) PLO slogans on an Israeli campus, is bound to excite Jewish revulsion, and can easily give rise to violence. This can only be heightened by the knowledge that the same Arab students, even while they complain of discrimination, enjoy certain privileges, such as exemption from army service, that are denied to Jews.

Yet there is apparently nothing illegal in what they do. In fact, had the Arab students actually been PLO agents, they would most probably have long ago wound up in the clink. Had they engaged in the stoning of military vehicles, like some West Bankers, or even civilian cars, like some Jerusalem Jews, they would also have been roundly punished.

Their actual offence consists not in committing any criminal action, but in uttering some offensive words. The words may indeed be so offensive that their utterance should be barred by law — but, in that case, the prohibition ought to apply equally on and off campus, and to all words that offend against the spirit of Israel's democracy.

Meir Kahane's toughs crying out on (and off) campus for the expulsion of all Arabs from all of Eretz Yisrael, are the precise moral equivalents of the PLO terrorists. Yet, although its founding father is now under administrative detention, for unspecified but presumably grave enough crimes, Kach still has not been outlawed — nor is its outlawry being proposed by Mr. Begin.

A simple solution to the university problem, such as it is, would be to ban all outdoor political demonstrations, as opposed to political debates, on campus. Three universities have in fact already taken such action: the problem lies in practical enforcement.

What may be taken for granted is that no university will choose to expel the adherents of just once stripe of political opinion, however odious. For Mr. Begin to threaten to do it for the universities, by invoking the government's financial hold over them, is to undermine academic freedom and the democratic system as well.

Perhaps Mr. Begin has been impressed with the recent smashing victory of the right-wing Castel faction, whose leadership is not wholly immune to Kach ideas, in the student-union elections at the Hebrew University. Castel won largely because it had run against the handful of PLO supporters, whose right of free speech had been upheld by the leftist Campus Bloc.

Although the Jerusalem student body does not very accurately reflect the popular mood, Castel's triumph could nevertheless be viewed as a prime example of how to convert the PLO into electoral gold nationally. Just tar the opposition with the PLO brush, and the people will forget how close the government has brought them to the precipice.

Mr. Begin's latest diversionary ploy is the rankest demagogy and the nearest thing to McCarthyism this country has not experienced.

Readers' letters are on page 15.

These thoughts by GIDEON RAFAEL on the state of democracy were prompted by the death of Prof. Jacob Talmon, the eminent historian and concerned citizen.

Reflections on democracy

THE FATEFUL struggle of this century between democracy and totalitarianism began on that eerie night in January 1933 when Hitler's hordes hailed in a torchlight procession the new master of Germany standing next to the Reich's president on the balcony of his palace. Paul von Hindenburg, the venerated field-marshal, became the inglorious undertaker of the Weimar Republic. Granted, Herr von Hindenburg was senile and the Weimar Republic tottering. The old warrior was not the first nor the last of the fading generals catapulted into political office who believed that they could save their country by betraying their principles.

Hitler came to power not by putsch but by the disintegration of parliamentary democracy. An economy depleted by inflation of astronomical dimensions, with ensuing mass unemployment, a drifting government, a society torn by internecine strife and a mood of national gloom formed the soil from which Nazism burgeoned.

Hitler rallied the forces of despair, whipped them into a frenzy, poisoned their minds and unleashed them with unbridled fury. The brown tidal wave which terrified governments had allowed to gather, burst the dam of democracy. It swept its institutions away and eradicated its cadres. Parliamentary democracy and civil liberties perished together with their abode, when Goering's arsonists burned down the Reichstag.

NAZISM KEPT its hold over the German people, not only by the attraction of its ideology and the force of its tyranny, but also by conjuring up the myth of a world conspiracy directed against Germany.

But in reality the world was far from united against the Nazi menace. It was as complacent as it was callous. It shut its eyes to the perils of the approaching cataclysm and its ports to the escaping Jewish boat people.

The forces of evil assumed an immensity and intensity the world had not known before, not only because of Nazi ruthlessness, but also of democratic meekness. Confusion, despondency, myopia, lack of civil courage and collective resistance were the causes of democracy's demise in Germany.

When the war ended Europe was devastated, the Jewish people cruelly decimated, and Germany divided. The Western world, which had fought two wars "to make the world safe for democracy," came to realize that after each war there was less democracy to save. After World War II a sizable part of Germany and half of Europe were under Soviet control, China and Indochina turned communist, and indigenous autocracy replaced foreign colonialism in vast areas of the world.

AGAINST THIS sombre background the emergence of a vibrant democratic Israel stood out as a bright hope for embattled democracy in the world. Israel's parliamentary government was an authentic reflection of the character and spirit of the Jewish people whose tenacious adherence to the tenets of individual liberty and social responsibility forms an inherent part of its national and spiritual heritage. In a bleak landscape stretching throughout the vast Arab domain from North Africa to South Yemen, Israel's democracy shone like a lonely beacon.

Subjected to the external pressures of unrelenting hostility and the internal constraints of moulding into a new nation newcomers from lands devoid of democratic tradition, Israel's democratic evolution constituted a singular achievement and perhaps a unique feat in the history of modern governance.

Democracy became the mainspring of Israel's strength to withstand the continuous assault on its very existence and generate at the same time the national will to cement its nationhood and build its modern civilization. Its democratic consensus became the constitutional expression of the spirit of voluntarism which had animated its pioneering founders. In a world where the area of freedom was constantly shrinking, the growth of the "bastion of democracy" — as Israel was admiringly referred to by its friends — was an outstanding exception.

Organized international terror has perhaps more than anything else contributed to the curbing of civil liberties, the perversion of the process of law and the civilized conduct of international relations. The necessity to adopt protective measures compels governments today to interfere with the personal freedom of the ordinary citizen to a degree that even Orwell did not visualize. Electronic surveillance of unsuspecting citizens has become legitimate practice; violation of privacy customary; and the computerization of personal data commonplace. Elections are fought more by optical illusion than by political persuasion. Democracy founded on the free decision and participation of the individual citizen increasingly assumes the form of manipulated mass moods, a dangerous trailblazer for totalitarian Gleichschaltung.

The leaders of the nine foremost European democracies are forced to convene in a monastery surrounded by the canals of Venice and 8,000 troops to protect them from the Italian affiliates of Arafat's terror syndicate, which meets at the same time undisturbed in Damascus. There the Fatah proclaims its unwavering resolve to destroy the State of Israel, while in Venice the heads of the European community elevate the implacable enemies of Jewish independence and democratic freedom to the status of legitimate participants in peace negotiations, conceding preference to the abstract principle of self-determination over the natural right of self-preservation.

It appears that the Europeans are reverting to the mood which prompted Churchill to say: "Each one hopes that if he feeds the crocodile enough, the crocodile will eat him last."

THE MALAISE of contemporary democracy has not by-passed Israel. The symptoms of the affliction manifest themselves in ways peculiar to its national temper, internal complications and international tribulations. The mood of the people is tense and depressed. Skyrocketing inflation produces a vertiginous sense of tumbling into a bottomless pit. Inflation corrupts traditional norms of responsible social behaviour. Developments at the stock exchange are more exciting than the opportunities offered by the labour market.

Inflation is not only eroding material and moral values, but, for the first time in Israel's history, is also tearing its political fabric apart. The wrangling over the defence budget has initiated a process of governmental disintegration. The great positive things that do occur in the country, and that have earned the Israel experiment in social innovation, human solidarity, scientific progress, rural development and international cooperation a reputation for excellence, are overshadowed by the image of a society wasting its creative energies in a process of national fission.

Actions by extremist groups accentuate the national debate conducted with growing stridency in the Knesset, the political parties and the media. The democratic protest against the spreading lawlessness distinguishes itself more by its civility than its virility. The mass of the people watch the unfolding drama from the sidelines as dumbfounded spectators. They are appalled by the striking incompetence of their leaders, the verbal violence of their elected representatives and the lawlessness of groups of self-styled saviours of the nation.

Yet it would be quite wrong to mistake this bewilderment for lack of feeling. Far from it. This may sound paradoxical. The Israelis, although eruptive in temperament, are slow to react. They register the failings and bide their time for a sensible response. Popular responsibility has been the hallmark of Israel's democratic way of life. Temporary electoral deviation was more an expression of protest than the endorsement of a programme.

NONETHELESS there exist dangerous undercurrents which rabble-rousers or adventurers may try to exploit. A military putsch in Israel? To believe it, one would need a very elastic imagination and very little faith in the sanity of the Israeli people.

If there are reasons for concern about the stability and durability of Israel's parliamentary democracy, they lie elsewhere. They are apparent in four areas: the evolution of the Arab-Israel conflict; the polarization of internal dissension; the disappointment in governmental performance; and the weakening of the will to defend democracy.

The inclusion of more than a million Arabs within the boundaries of Israel would not only jeopardize the demographic composition of the Jewish State but also its democratic character. If annexation of the administered territories is indeed being contemplated, three options are open to Israel: to grant full civil rights to the added Arab population; to deny them; or to deprive Jews and Arabs alike of their democratic freedoms.

The first is an improbable proposition considering its effects on the Zionist vocation of the State, its national security and the functioning of its parliamentary institutions. Israel would be a civilized but no more enticing version of Arafat's "secular Palestine State." Before the year 2000 it would wreck "the hope of two millennia."

The second option would compel the government to maintain colonial rule over part of its territory, creating an untenable situation defied by Arabs, despised by Jews and resisted by the world community.

And the third possibility, of suspending elections altogether and ruling by emergency decree, is an unthinkable state of affairs. It would not only disenfranchise the citizens of Israel, but dissociate Israel from its spiritual tradition and disintegrate its links with the Diaspora.

There is a fourth solution — that the Palestinians should disappear. It exists in the sick mind of a man who blasphemously calls himself a "rabbi." Kahane's obscene proposal is as undebatable as Arafat's genocidal Charter.

IT WOULD BE short-sighted to overlook the danger of radicalization in Israel emanating from the deterioration of relations between Jews and Arabs in the administered territories and within the pre-1967 borders of the country. The tensions in the universities are symptomatic, and were reflected in the results of the recent students' elections at the Hebrew University. The lingering unrest in Judea and Samaria is another critical sign.

These tensions are exacerbated by the absence of concrete prospects for the determination of the future status of the administered territories and its inhabitants; the increasing recognition and influence of the PLO; the settlement policy of the government and the pugnacious stance of the settlers; the sharpened Arab antagonism; and the world-wide disapproval of Israel's position.

The mounting economic and social disaffection adds considerably to the stresses of Israeli society. Tensions are building up which could become explosive when the currents of economic dislocation and social excitation converge. A government manifestly incapable of coping with the situation, divided against itself, disseminating cabinet intimacies and dissimulating solid facts, dealing with the vital defence requirements of the nation by the unedifying method of barter and quick fix, hectoring its few friends in the world instead of arguing with them, not only loses the confidence of its voters but weakens the faith of the people in the functioning of the democratic process.

Here lies the real danger. Voices clamouring for authoritarian guidance are trying to drown the legitimate call for orderly and competent government. Generals offer remedies and politicians exert themselves to divert the popular anger from the stumbling government to its challengers, branding them for betraying the national interest and imperilling the security of the State. They disclose secrets of negotiations between Arab and Israeli statesmen, in order to frustrate their resumption. They create the bogey of imminent danger, of a world set on Israel's destruction, and a State struggling in arid isolation against its enemies.

NO WONDER, then, that in all this tumult and shouting, authoritarian rule is equated with competence and democratic government with mismanagement.

Whether our body politic will remain immune to the anti-democratic virus depends less on the capacity of the rabble-rousers than on the intensity of our democratic commitment. To treat those bent on the demolition of democracy with snobbish derision will not disarm them. Nonchalance is not the answer to the challenge. The weakness of the defenders of democracy is the strength of its assailants.

The supporters of the democratic way of life, the leaders of the parliamentary parties, the press, the labour movement, the liberal community of free enterprise and free professions must be on constant alert to weed out the growth of anti-democratic tendencies. They must warn against cheap slogans and deceptive short cuts. They must strengthen the understanding that democracy, with all its shortcomings, outshines the deceptive glitter of autocracy.

It has been said that democracy is the worst form of government except for those other forms that have been tried from time to time. Democratic incompetence is reparable but dictatorial abuse irrevocable. More than any others, the Jews have suffered from its deadly effects.

The voice of Professor Talmon is silent and his pen lies still. But his teachings are alive. They are his memorial and our lesson. What history teaches is a debatable question. But one thing is certain. It can teach only those who are willing to learn.

Dear Mr. Begin,
In answer to your request that citizens donate one day a month to the government, I wish to offer my services and for this month I would like to take the position of Prime Minister on Monday the 30th from 7.30 a.m. — 10 p.m. Please reply at your earliest.
P.S. Next month I would like to be Foreign Minister. I would NEVER like to be Finance Minister 'cos you people don't give 20% discounts like we do.

Urgent Appeal
An honest, unassuming man has just died, leaving in considerable distress a family of 12. As we are personally familiar with the family's circumstances, we issue this appeal to the generous hearted to set up a fund to maintain the family — this would be a great mitzva. All who aid in supporting a widow and orphans will be rewarded by the Almighty.
